Federal Suit Filed . . .

Omaha Schools 'Racially Biased'

Omaha (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department Friday filed a school desegregation suit against the Omaha School District and the Board of Education.

The department accused the district of "operating a system of racially segregated schools, in violation of federal law and the Constitution."

The suit would force the district to order the school board to develop and implement a plan to desegregate five schools.

Along with the complaint Friday, the Justice Department filed a motion requesting the court "to enter an order requiring the school district to design and implement a plan of its own that would assure the legality of pupil assignments to the Martin Luther King Middle School this fall," and to discontinue certain discriminatory student transfer policies."

The suit followed a July 16 decision by the Omaha School Board. In a unanimous decision, the board declined to commit itself to a department directive to integrate at least five schools which have predominantly black enrollment.

At that time, school board attorneys predicted the decision would be interpreted by the department as a refusal to comply, and that followup action by the department was expectable.

In refusing to commit itself to the directive, the board issued a statement that denied it had deviated from its neighborhood school policy, and denied it had brought about or maintained any intentional segregation of schools. However, the board stressed its willingness to continue negotiations with the Justice Department on the matter. Those "negotiations" had continued off and on for two months when Friday's suit was filed.

School board attorney Kenneth B. Holm, Supt. Owen A. Knutzen and Associate Supt. Joe E. Hanna were out of town Friday.

Recently, a committee of board members was appointed, whose members in turn were to select a "community committee," that would advise the board on possible response to the Justice Department.

The Justice Department's motion filed with the suit alleges that under an existing plan, Martin Luther King School would open as a racially segregated school and in some cases black students would be removed from integrated schools to attend it.

The Justice Department contended "that students affected would be irreparably harmed; and that the public interest in the ordinary desegregation of schools would be promoted by the opening of the King School" on an integrated basis.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Gen. J. Stanley Pottinger said the department had informed the school board in a letter of its findings "concerning the de jure segregation in Omaha," and that the department had been negotiating with the school board since that time to determine if an acceptable desegregation plan could be developed.

"Our negotiations have been constructive and we believe that we still have the basis for coming to eventual agreement on the problems that remain," Pottinger said in a statement.

Pottinger said "the filing of this suit does not mean that we have reached a stalemate with the board. In light of the short time before school opens, however, it is only fair to the community to have the Martin Luther King situation aired as quickly as possible, with the school board officials given the immediate chance to present their views to an impartial judge."

"The suit is designed to do this, and to provide a framework for oncoming negotiations and the resolution of whatever additional problems exist," the statement said.

At the time of filing, the school board was notified by Pottinger of the department's desire to negotiate "to resolve the matter without unnecessary court proceedings," the department said.

THREE MEN . . . dance at the pow-wow which began Friday in Lincoln.

Pow-Wow Is Off On Right Foot

By EARL DYER
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln's Indian pow-wow got off to a slow but sure start Friday afternoon with a flag-raising ceremony and a gourd dance with upwards of a dozen dancers.

Leaders of the Lincoln Indian community indicated before the event is over Sunday they expect hundreds of dancers and spectators, though not the thousands earlier predicted by some.

Dancers were expected on hand at Sawyer Snell Park, 1st and South streets, from at least half a dozen states, and Ago Sheridan, a local Omaha Indian, said he was still expecting another five-car caravan from Oklahoma, and perhaps more.

Coming from Oklahoma was a sizeable group of members of the Kiowa Tia-Piah Society to join in traditional gourd dances with the Omaha Tia-Piah Society, made up mostly of Omahas who live in Lincoln.

Head singer for the three-day affair is Bill Kaulitty of Carnegie, Okla., a Kiowa member of the Tia-Piah Society. More than a dozen tents had been set up on the park grounds Friday afternoon, and Sheridan said most Indians attending the pow-wow would be camping at the site.

Visitors are welcomed — and there's no admission fee — to the dancing sessions, but the site has no bleachers, so visitors will be well advised to bring blankets or chairs.

This is the first time a pow-wow has been held in a city park. Sheridan said friends of the Lincoln Indian community had purchased required liability insurance and posted the bond required by the city.

The city Friday was installing lights for the night dancing sessions. Water for campers was coming from a National Guard tank.

Saturday and Sunday dancing sessions are scheduled to get under way at 2 and 7 p.m. or shortly thereafter.

More Bodies Found; Toll Hits 23

HOUSTON (AP) — Police unearthed the bodies of three more apparent victims of a homosexual procurement ring Friday and continued the search for more corpses. The death toll grew to 23.

The latest bodies were uncovered in the dunes of a small beach community. A teen-aged school dropout who said he and another youth participated in the slayings told police 27 victims may be found — making it the largest mass murder in the nation's history.

Guided by David Brooks, 18, and Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, officers began digging at High Island, about 60 miles east of here, early Friday afternoon.

Officers said the first body was lying in a fetal position in a shallow grave and the other corpse was found a short while later. Police had reported a third body was found at the High Island site but later said that report was erroneous.

Earlier, police said, Brooks gave authorities a statement outlining his involvement in the case. "I regret this happening and feel sorry for the families of the kids," police quoted Brooks as saying in his signed statement.

Supervised by police, jail trustees dug through the night and all day Thursday, unearthing 17 bodies in the stretch-filled tin shed. Police probed soft areas of ground around the shed Friday but said they did not expect to find any more bodies there.

Escorted by Henley, police then drove to near Broadus Thursday night where they found two more bodies, shrouded in plastic sheeting and buried in a wooded area. Two more were uncovered Friday morning.

Police then focused the search on High Island, whose sand dunes Henley said would yield "at least six more" bodies. Police said they planned to have Brooks point out the graveyards at High Island, however.

Police were having a difficult time identifying many of the badly decomposed corpses. Ten youths on police missing persons lists, however, lived in the general area of the homes of Henley or Corli.

So far, only two of the bodies in the state's biggest mass murder case have been positively identified. They were Marty Ray Jones, 18, shot twice in the head, and Charles Cary Cobble, 17, who had been strangled.

The bodies were among 17 found Thursday in a Houston boat shed, where officers were led by Henley. Police quoted Henley as saying as many as 30 persons may have been killed.

Police Lt. Breck Porter said Henley had admitted he and David Brooks, 18, procured teenage boys for Dean Allen Corli, 33, for the past 18 months, sometimes helping him kill and bury those who refused to engage in homosexual sex acts.

Porter said Brooks also has given police a statement.

"We plan to file murder charges against them later in the day," Porter said.

"He (Corli) would rape them, kill them and bring them out here to bury them," Henley said Thursday. Henley said Corli gave him and Brooks $5 to $10 for each teen-age boy they brought to him.

The grim search for bodies began Wednesday when Henley telephoned police at Pasadena, a Houston suburb, and told them he had shot Corli to death following an all-night sex party.

Police found Corli, an electrician, dead at the home and Henley, another youth and a 15-year-old girl waiting inside for them.

Motorcyclist, 16, Is Injured

A 16-year-old Lincoln youth was listed in "satisfactory" condition at Bryan Memorial Hospital with injuries he received in a car-motorcycle accident at 83rd and O Friday evening.

The Lancaster County sheriff's office said Kurt Dicke, of 8116 Sanborn, suffered a broken jaw when the motorcycle he was riding was in collision with a car driven by Thomas Maddox, 16, of 5820 Sunrise.

Leahy Says Suit Filing Is Helpful

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Former Mayor Eugene Leahy said filing of a lawsuit against the Omaha public schools would be helpful because it would "put psychological pressure" on the community committee of the board to reach solutions to the desegregation issue.

Leahy said he based his impressions on a meeting with federal officials in Washington, D.C., Tuesday, which was attended also by school officials.

School Board attorneys also have said they expect a suit to be filed, but they hope to avoid litigation. Since it appears a suit will be filed, Leahy said, "let's get on with the lawsuit, and bring about an adjudication of this issue. Let's see who's right or wrong."

Leahy said Justice Department officials did not waver on their original charge that discrimination exists in Omaha schools and that five schools need to be desegregated.

He said the federal authorities are pleased with the proposed formation of the board's community committee and will work with it.

Palestinians Foil Israelis

By United Press International

Israeli warplanes forced an Arab airliner to land at a military base in the Jewish state Friday night, but released the plane and its 81 occupants after a puzzling, two-hour check of the passengers and crew.

An Israeli spokesman refused to say why the warplanes intercepted the Middle East Airlines twin-engine Caravelle over Lebanon, but guerrilla sources indicated it might have been an unsuccessful attempt to capture four Palestinian commando leaders.

The Arab sources said four leaders of the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), including leader George Habash, were supposed to be aboard the seized airliner, but changed their minds at the last moment.

The sources said the four guerrilla chiefs cancelled their reservations after a four-hour delay in the flight from Beirut to Baghdad, Iraq. "The delay made them smell something fishy and they decided not to board the plane," one guerrilla source said.

Military sources in Tel Aviv and airport sources in Beirut said guerrilla leaders were aboard the plane, but they were permitted to take off and return to Beirut with the rest of the 74 passengers and seven crew members.

Youth in Action

Lincolnite To Spread Message

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

A young Lincolnite who's interested in proving that youthful citizens can be dynamic forces in Nebraska communities will be spreading that message to about 200 of his peers when they gather Sunday in Lincoln for the annual Nebraska Conference of Youth.

He is 19-year-old Landis Magnuson, one of the conference organizers and slated nominee for vice president of the Nebraska Council of Youth.

That statewide organization of young people cosponsors the annual conference, along with the Nebraska Committee for Children and Youth, the council's parent organization.

The conference, slated Sunday through Tuesday at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education, will give young leaders from across the state the chance to compare notes and brainstorm a bit for new ideas and gain insight from resource persons.

In Charge Of Program

As Lincoln district coordinator during the past year, Magnuson helped line up the Capital City delegation. And as one of the conference organizers, he's in charge of the first day's program on Sunday.

"The entire philosophy" on which the youth council operates, said Magnuson, is one which suggests "youth within selected communities can be constructive and valuable" citizens.

"They are a vital and interested and dynamic part of the community," he said.

The councils are particularly strong in small towns, Magnuson noted, because there are generally not as many recreational opportunities on an organized basis in the rural areas.

Thus, he said, many a small-town youth council functions effectively via sponsorship of a youth center.

In the larger cities, such as Lincoln, the youth councils face different challenges, he said.

"As district coordinator for Lincoln, I tried to develop a philosophy of purpose in a community of this size," said Magnuson.

"It plagued us all year long."

One of the ideas which may still prove fruitful, he said, is to attempt to get youthful representation in various organizations whose activities directly affect young people.

activities over the next three days in Lincoln will include a number of chances for youths to share their own successes with others.

There will also be adult resource people on hand, mainly for two panel discussions on juvenile delinquency.

But Magnuson emphasized that he's most interested in what other youths have to share.

"The conference this time promises to be more interesting and exciting than ever," he said.

Jerusalem — Israel announced that its Air Force had intercepted a Middle East Airlines jet airliner approaching Beirut and forced the Arab plane to a military airfield in Israel. The plane was detained by the Israelis for a "passenger check" for two hours and was then permitted to continue its scheduled flight to Iraq, with its 74 passengers and crew of 7. (More on Page 1.)

'Separate Procedure' Authorized

Chicago — Former Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, now President Nixon's adviser for domestic affairs, said that he had authorized "a separate reporting procedure" for the administration's secret B52 bombing raids in Cambodia in 1969 but

Nixon Praises, Signs Farm Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon signed a landmark farm bill Friday, saying it should spur full production, help fight inflation, protect farmers against risks and ultimately benefit taxpayers and consumers.

While complaining about some provisions of the massive four-year farm and food stamp bill, Nixon said it "represents a realistic compromise" between his administration and Congress on several key economic issues. "Though it falls short of the high standards I have set for reforming farm legislation and eventually moving the government out of agriculture," the President said, "it does provide a constructive framework for encouraging the expansion of farm production."

In this time of "unprecedented demand for farm commodities," Nixon added, "it is essential to provide expanded production by allowing farmers the freedom to make production decisions."

The President said this new law, passed last week, "should help in our battle against inflation."

Federal payments would be made only if available market prices fall below the target price in the legislation. Payments would make up the difference between the market price and the target.

The target would stay constant for 1974 and 1975 but would be adjusted in 1976 and 1977 by a formula reflecting farm costs and crop yields.

The President said this new system "means that our farmers can expand production during the current period of worldwide food and fiber shortages without fear of a serious drop in farm income."

Watergate Response Readied

Camp David, Md. (AP) — President Nixon worked with his chief speechwriter and Watergate lawyer Friday as the White House announced he would make his promised response to revelations of the Senate Watergate committee next week.

The White House said the response would come in a speech in Washington sometime in mid-week.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said there was still no decision on the exact time or format of the speech. There has been speculation Nixon would choose a nationally televised address or an appearance before a bipartisan gathering in the White House with TV coverage for his statement.

The President, at Camp David since Wednesday, was expected to remain there through the weekend, Warren said. Nixon says he does his best thinking at the mountaintop retreat.

He was joined Friday by his long-time chief speechwriter, Patrick Buchanan, and his special Watergate counsel, J. Fred Buzhardt.

Already at work on what may be one of the most important speeches of his administration were speechwriter Raymond Price, chief of staff Alexander M. Haig Jr., Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler and Personal Secretary Rose Mary Woods.

Warren said the President has not ruled out the possibility of a Watergate press conference before he departs for a scheduled California visit. Nor has the President decided whether there will be a statement in addition to the speech on Watergate, Warren said.

The complicated charges, testimony and ramifications of the Watergate affair make it likely that Nixon may choose to make his public stand in several forms.

Nixon has said he would have a press conference and would answer questions about Watergate perhaps in another forum. And Warren said, "You may assume the President will

Divers Seek Andrea Doria Loot

Fairhaven, Mass. (UPI) — Two former Navy aquanauts, working in shark-infested waters some 250 feet below the surface of the Atlantic Friday, searched for fortune in cash and valuables entombed in the sunken ocean liner Andrea Doria.

The two divers, Donald Rodocker, 27, and Christopher Delucchi, 22, both of San Diego, entered cabins aboard the 700-foot Italian ship on Thursday and removed "a few items of interest," according to Tom Ingersoll, a member of the support diving team stationed aboard the trawler Narragansett.

Ingersoll, 33, said the two men had spent "a very comfortable night" in the underwater habitat known as "Mother," and as of noon Friday were getting ready to exit and begin working.

Ingersoll said he was "not at liberty" to identify the items recovered on Thursday. "I can't give you specifics," he said in a radio-telephone interview. "It was just a few miscellaneous items. I can't tell you what their value is."

The items were retrieved from various cabins and taken aboard the Narragansett by surface cables and lines, he said.

Ingersoll said he doubted that Rodocker and Delucchi would attempt to go straight for the

Gulf Oil Made Donation Under Intense Pressure

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. said Friday that in response to intense political pressure, it contributed $100,000 to President Nixon's 1972 reelection campaign.

Federal law prohibits corporations from making direct political contributions.

Gulf made its announcement in a one-page statement, and company spokesmen refused to comment beyond the statement.

The company did not say who authorized the contribution, nor did it define the nature of the political pressure.

"I just cannot go beyond the statement," said Paul Sheldon, chief of public relations for Gulf. "That's as specific as I can be."

The statement said Gulf donated its contribution through The Finance Committee to Reelect the President.

At its own request, Gulf said, the money had been returned. In addition, the company said the matter was being investigated by special prosecutor Archibald Cox, in charge of the federal probe of the 1972 presidential campaign.

The donation was made at a time when there was growing concern over oil imports, the controversial Alaska pipeline and the possibility of an energy shortage, but Gulf said specifically that it "was not seeking any special favors and did not have any corporate activity under government scrutiny."

Peron Delays Nomination

By The New York Times
Buenos Aires — Argentina has settled into a period of deep confusion and inertia, in which even hardened politicians acknowledge that only one man, Juan Domingo Peron, appears to be in command of crucial decisions that will determine the political course of the country.

Four weeks have passed since Peron forced the resignation of his loyal follower, Dr. Hector J. Campora, from the presidency, thus apparently paving his own way to the top government post.

But Peron has inexplicably delayed accepting or rejecting his party's nomination, unanimously handed to him last weekend.

Wednesday night, the reporters, who keep a 24-hour watch outside his suburban mansion, tried again to pin down the elusive, enigmatic Peron on the subject of his candidacy.

Earlier in the day, Peron's personal doctors announced that his health was "excellent," thus dispelling one of the excuses the 77-year-old leader has used to ward off the politically curious.

"Well, yes, but there is also Dr. Peron, who knows the patient well," joked Peron. "And he says I am still under observation."

But the web of uncertainty Peron has spun goes beyond his own candidacy.

On Aug. 4, for example, he convinced his party to unanimously nominate his wife, Isabel, as his running mate. The delegates to the party convention readily complied, confident that Isabel would renounce her candidacy that very night or a few days later.

But Wednesday night, almost a week after her nomination, Isabel publicly declared: "I have no reason to renounce anything."

In 1951, Peron's late wife, Eva

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar Friday bounded to its highest levels against major European currencies for more than a month, and the price of gold tumbled.

The dollar was significantly stronger against the German mark, the French franc and the British pound.

Terri Holsher Chosen Miss Rodeo Nebraska

BURWELL, Neb. (AP)—A surprised Terri Holsher, 19, of Scottsbluff was selected here Friday as the new Miss Rodeo Nebraska as Nebraska's Big Rodeo finished the second day of a four-day run.

The blond-haired, blue-eyed University of Nebraska-Lincoln student is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marion L. Holsher.

This fall, Terri will be a sophomore majoring in fashion merchandising.

She's been riding since grade school, and was last year's Nebraska High School Rodeo Queen.

She won the top honors riding a 12-year-old registered quarter horse named Sparks Twist.

After her selection, Terri was crowned by Chris Ferguson of Ord, and was given the traditional rodeo kiss by two-time world champion Bill Smith of Cody, Wyo.

Dawn Lanka of Stapleton took the runner-up honors.

Dawn was also named Miss Congeniality.

The horsemanship award went to Kim Brennemann of Hyannis.

Judge Dismisses Part Of Suit Filed By Manager Of Adult Book Stores

U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom has dismissed part of a suit filed by John Serafine, president or former manager of Lincoln's two Adult Book and Cinema Stores, in an attempt to block prosecution of obscenity charges against him in Lancaster County Court.

Urbom dismissed a portion of the suit which asked that a three-judge panel be convened to declare the state's obscenity laws unconstitutional because they denied Serafine due process of law and had a chilling effect on his freedom of speech.

Urbom, however, did not dismiss a portion of the suit which alleges that Serafine was arrested without probable cause and without an arrest warrant and that he was subsequently unlawfully imprisoned.

In addition, that portion of the suit charges that officials did not comply with federal guidelines which require a prior adversary hearing before the seizing of allegedly obscene materials or the arrest of any individual for offenses dealing with allegedly obscene material.

Urbom has already denied a request for a temporary restraining order to block prosecution against Serafine.

At a hearing on the case, attorney Herbie Friedman told Urbom that he has not been in touch with Serafine for some time and no longer knows of the manager's whereabouts.

Omaha Given $70,000 Grant For Railroad Relocation Study

Omaha (UPI) — Federal Railroad Administrator John W. Ingram said Friday approval has been given for the department's $70,000 participation in a $125,000 contract for the initial study of a railroad relocation project here.

He said Omaha's Riverfront redevelopment project was "a good example of government and business working together."

Stressing the cooperation of the eight railroads involved in the plan, Ingram said they had pledged $55,000 in work and had already moved some freight and passenger yards, freeing Riverfront property for redevelopment.

The seven-month study contract will concentrate on a rail system inventory and analysis on the Omaha side of the Missouri River. However, Ingram said this "is only the beginning of a much bigger venture involving the areas on both sides of the river."

Proud Papa Announces Baby's Arrival

Dan Keleher had a big announcement to make Friday, and he made it in a big way. He and his wife, Dixie, became the proud parents of a baby girl Friday. She weighed in at 6 pounds, 4 1/2 ounces. It's their sixth child. Keleher is the manager of a local advertising agency; he said he'll surprise his wife with a billboard at 52nd and O when he takes her home from the hospital early next week. The "baby announcement" stands 12 feet tall and is 25 feet long. The other children are Danny, 11; Rita, 10; Theresa, 7; Stephanie, 4; and Cathy, 2 1/2. The Kelehers, who moved to 210 Glenhaven Drive from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, last fall, were expecting a boy this time, so they haven't yet picked out a name for their fifth girl.

Laird Denies 'Falsification' Orders

By The New York Times

Chicago — Former Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said Friday that he had authorized "a separate reporting procedure" for the Nixon administration's secret B-52 bombing raids in Cambodia in 1969 but insisted he had not sanctioned "the falsification of any Air Force, Navy or Defense Department records."

At a news conference at the Drake Hotel here, Laird was asked about a highly classified Pentagon memorandum made public in Washington Thursday that discussed a method of hiding from the press clandestine bombing operations in Cambodia in 1969 and 1970.

The "eyes only" memorandum, released at a Senate Armed Services Committee hearing investigating the falsification of reports, was written by Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, who was then chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and who is now retired.

It provided for a 41-plane force of B-52's to strike targets in Cambodia while others attacked normally assigned targets in South Vietnam and Laos.

"Strikes on these latter targets," the document said, "will provide a resemblance to normal operations thereby providing a credible story for replies to press inquiries."

The procedure outlined in the memorandum called for the Cambodian raids to be officially recorded in the military's classified data system as having taken place over South Vietnam.

Recommended Strikes

"I confirm completely that I recommended the strikes," Laird said of the Cambodian sorties. He added that he was convinced it was necessary to attack the "sanctuaries" of Vietnam and North Vietnamese soldiers in order to reduce American casualties.

The operations were conducted in secret more for diplomatic than military reasons, he said, because the Cambodian government had told the State Department it would have to condemn them if they were made public but would support the raids if they "remained out of public knowledge."

"The press was told of the targeting in South Vietnam," Laird said, "but the secret strikes they were not told of."

Because of what he termed "diplomatic sensitivity" and "not because of military significance," he said, "a separate channel of reporting was established for these particular attacks."

As to any "falsification of reports," Laird said, "I cannot justify that. I did not order that."

Man Held In $9,000 Burglary

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—FBI agents Friday arrested Ervin Eugene Stewart, 25, of Omaha.

Ronald L. Maley, the special agent in charge of the FBI office here, said Stewart's arrest stemmed from the June 6, 1973, burglary of the Federal Credit Union located at the University of Nebraska Medical Center here.

Stewart, unemployed, was the third person to be arrested by federal agents in connection with the $9,000 burglary, and was charged with receiving stolen property taken from a federally protected financial institution.

Agents said they had been seeking Stewart for about one month, and that he offered no resistance when he was arrested at a residence.

Maley said Stewart would appear at a hearing Monday before U.S. Magistrate Richard C. Peck.

If convicted, Maley said Stewart would face a maximum penalty of $5,000 or a 10 year prison term, or both.

Under the four-power pact that went into force on June 3, 1972, the Western allies and the Russians agreed to ease and normalize access along the land routes. As a result, the German Democratic Republic lifted its stringent controls of travelers, their vehicles, and of supply trucks.

For East German dissidents the easing of traffic regulations opened a new way to circumvent the Berlin border wall, built by the Communists 12 years ago to close all flight routes.

SUN In 'Holding Period' Pending Funding Decision

Why Did Texas Trio Get Away With It?

By GORDON WINTERS

Star Staff Writer

How could, as it is alleged in Houston, a ring of perverted sex killers murder perhaps 30 persons during a three-year period and get away with it?

When he fields that question, Lincoln Police Inspector Robert Butcher says he answers, "It depends on what future investigation turns up."

Whether the alleged ring operated just in Houston or whether they operated in other places, for example, is one question that hasn't been answered yet, Butcher said.

He noted that four bodies, allegedly victims of the ring, were found at Sam Rayburn Lake, about 125 miles from Houston.

"Theories are no good in a thing like this," Butcher said. "As Paul Douglas (Lancaster County attorney) says, 'I don't like theories; I like facts.'"

The larger a city, Butcher said, the more likely that a bizarre case like that reported in Houston could occur.

However, "if you had 15 adults missing for 30 days in Lincoln it would be cause for suspicion," Butcher said.

He said police would be more suspicious when an adult with a home, family and steady job disappears, than when a person arrives in Lincoln, rents a motel room for 30 days and then one day vanishes.

Butcher said the Lincoln police "keep a card," on each person reported to be missing. The bulk of these, he said, are juveniles.

He also pointed out a recent case in which a Wilber couple, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Oliva disappeared July 28 and have not been found.

DAC Downtown Study Takes A Step Forward manager to be interviewed.

DAC member Paul Amen remarked, "This may sound like an oversimplification, but I think we could pick one today based on their national reputation. But the key is — who they'll put on the project."

In an effort to receive public suggestions on the study, DAC authorized publication of a newspaper ad outlining the committee's basic goals for downtown development. Space will be provided for public response to those goals.

Additionally, the committee will poll downtown property owners for their responses to the project.

The Downtown Advisory Committee (DAC) took a major step in getting a central business district study off the ground by appointing a subcommittee to narrow down the field of consultants which will be interviewed for the job.

In the next two weeks, the subcommittee will consider about a dozen applicants and arrange for the entire DAC to interview four or five of those consultants.

DAC member George Williamson cautioned the group not to choose a consultant on the basis of "some fast talking promoter." He suggested that the consultants send the project

Indian Education Staffers Needed

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Public Schools this week formally launched a search for two staff members for an Indian education project involving the schools and the Indian community.

Word was received this week that the U.S. Office of Education had granted $11,048 for the project in the coming school year.

Those funds will be used to hire two new staff members — an Indian counselor and a home-school assistant to work with pre-schoolers and parents.

"We hope to fill both jobs within a week," said Terry Workman, administrative assistant for management services in the Lincoln schools.

Committee Proposal

The proposal for the federal grant was developed by an advisory committee, chaired by Lee Kills Enemy, one of the Indian adults who composed half of the committee.

Kills Enemy said the program will be designed to serve the 250 Indian students and 22 Indian pre-schoolers in the community.

Workman said the project will have a dual emphasis: Indian-school involvement and school staff understanding of Indian needs.

Workman said he hopes both of the staff members to be hired under the project will be Indians from the community. Neither job will require a teaching certificate.

The Indian counselor, with expertise in Indian tradition and culture, will work with students, school employees and parents in counseling, referring special needs cases to appropriate agencies and helping students find part-time jobs.

Home Visits

The counselor's assistant will attend to needs of pre-school and young elementary children, making frequent home visits.

The counselor will also act as a school resource person to develop written, visual and audio materials and bilingual dictionaries for elementary and secondary students.

He will also review existing library and curricular materials which relate to Indians.

In other efforts, the schools will establish a tutorial program in language arts, social sciences and mathematics for all Indian students. The program will be coordinated with existing student assistance services.

The entire project, to be known as "Indians Concerned for Indians," will continue to function with the aid of the advisory committee of Indian parents and students and teaching staff members.

That committee will remain active to assist in evaluation of the project's activities.

"I'm eternally optimistic about being funded," said McBride. "We think the SUN project still represents the most significant and best researched open-learning project yet developed."

McBride said he expects federal approval of a $297,000 grant to keep the project alive until Dec. 31.

"This is the most critical period for SUN," said McBride. "If we can get the funding, then we'll be over the hump."

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

In a recent issue, Business Week magazine reported that "as a suburban retail competition waxes keener, more and more chains are expanding back into downtown areas . . . Apparently the pendulum continues to swing in the country, going first one way and then another.

For many years now the cities have been plagued by the problem of declining downtown business and expanding suburban activity. It would be an interesting development if the situation reversed itself and the downtown once again became the envy of retailers.

But when you think about it, it is not such an unusual development and as the above report shows, it is already happening on a small scale. Lincoln has survived the downtown exodus syndrome so would be in a most enviable position if conditions suddenly pointed to expansion in that area.

In other words, to make a comeback when you have never really been down and out is to arrive at a pretty high level of existence. We are not suggesting that downtown Lincoln is about to become a boom center but real estate bargains are going to be harder and harder to find.

Just this week it was announced that the old Sears building, temporarily occupied by the National Bank of Commerce, has been acquired by a local group from largely Eastern interests. Nothing was said about the situation other than an intent to remodel the building for new use.

Our suspicion or guess is that plans are to use at least the ground floor as small retail outlets. What this might leave for the upper floors, we don't know but it is the retailing development that is intriguing.

Retailing, after all, is the life-blood of downtown and the historic foundation on which it has been built and by which it has survived. Despite a lot of other things, downtown would go through a terrible wringer if the bottom went out of its retailing.

That retailing, of course, is closely tied to many other things, all of which are quite encouraging in Lincoln. The remodeling and new construction that have taken place in downtown Lincoln in the past three years is nothing but phenomenal.

If it could be determined, we would guess that downtown Lincoln would rate on a national survival scale very near the top. On a future potential scale, it would again be near the same position.

Beyond what has happened is a future of promise. When we finally complete the through traffic by-pass with a western fringe area route, the downtown area will be substantially enhanced. If the new multi-purpose municipal building on O from 11th to 12th materializes, which appears to be a distinct possibility, further enhancement would be obvious.

If the Sears building is finally put to constructive use, that will add another dimension to things. In the rumor stage are several other programs that could greatly promote the future of the area.

Then there is the phenomenon of which Business Week speaks, the growing competition of suburban centers. Lincoln has that kind of suburban competition and is on the brink of a substantial addition to it. If the bubble bursts in the suburbs, where else is there to go but back downtown?

Such a situation isn't all gravy by any means but it is one of the better things that could happen to us. It will present problems and challenges but any opportunity demands that you put something into it. If the national trend is back to downtown, it could be quite an explosion in Lincoln.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE

Decimal Point Shift To Instant Deflation

NEW YORK — If the economic geniuses in Washington really want to stop inflation, they're on the wrong track with all that fooling around with price controls . . . and wage ceilings . . . and phases 1, 2, 3, 3½, 4, etc., etc., etc.

When eggs crack the $1-a-dozen ceiling, it's time for drastic action. And that's where the decimal point comes in.

It's easy to see how everybody's overlooked the lowly decimal, lately. After all, when a new Pentagon toy costs $12,897,744.184.75, you notice that insignificant little dot?

Well, folks, that little dot could be the very thing that will stop prices from getting even crazier than they already are. All the government has to do is move it over one digit to the left — and inflated prices will be no more.

Steak won't be $2.85 a pound; it will drop instantly to 28 cents. Eggs will be 10 cents a dozen. Bacon will cost 20 cents a pound. We might even be able to afford lettuce again — at six cents a head.

A house with a $30,000 price tag (if you can find one anywhere) will cost only $3,000. And, even with interest rates zooming toward the 10% bracket, that cuts your $300 mortgage payment to $30.

The automobile that sets you back $4,000 today will, under the relocated decimal system, cost only $400. Things haven't been that good since Henry came up with his Tin Lizzie.

This solves the rocketing costs of education, too. No longer would you have to scrounge up $5,000 a year to send Sonny off to college; $500 would do it.

Some other goodies might come back, too: penny candy . . .

the five-cent cigar . . . nickel beer . . . maybe even the nickel candy bar.

This works all the way across the board: telephone, gas, electricity and water bills, too. Ninety per cent cheaper, every one. (Although it wouldn't force the big utilities to kick their habit or raising rates every 10 minutes. This is a solution, not a miracle.)

The big surprise would come in your taxes. If you're coughing up $20,000 now, the IRS could get to you for less than the $2,000 you'd expect, because you'd be in a lower tax bracket. And a lot of folks would be wiped off the tax lists completely.

(Which may be why the government would never go for this dandy little decimal gimmick. They need every drop of our blood they can squeeze out to pay for those cost overruns.)

Of course, there's a kicker in this system, and you may have guessed it by now. When you shift the decimal to the left and have to do it with everything — and that goes for the old paycheck, too.

Thus, a man making $200 a week would take an instant wage cut to $20, which is what people worked for in the good, old days that everybody wishes we had back. The $2.20-an-hour minimum wage would be 22 cents. (The first one in 1938, was actually 25 cents, and this was to give everybody a raise.)

Steak was only for the rich folks . . . nobody but heiresses wore mink . . . and not everybody could afford college, automobiles, or even $3,000 houses. Remember?

So we'd all still be just as broke as ever. But we'd have inflation licked, by gum. Psychologically, anyway.

Another Blue Ribbon Report

The report of the National Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals will, we imagine, find its way to the circular file in short order.

Like the findings of other blue ribbon ad hoc national commissions before it, the set of guidelines for governmental action offered by this commission will insult the sensibilities of a broad spectrum of the American public. The majority is not ready for governmental confiscation of its handguns, nor will the moral sense of many permit the so-called "liberalization" of laws dealing with victimless crimes.

But this is what the commission calls for.

In its report issued Thursday of this week, the commission recommended that all states outlaw the private possession of handguns within ten years and confiscate those now in civilian hands except for inoperative guns held by collectors. Among other recommendations, the commission also said that the states should review laws against victimless crimes with an eye toward liberalizing them by putting an end to jail sentences for such offenses as gambling, marijuana use, pornography, prostitution and private sexual acts between consenting adults.

The advocates of traditional morality and its application to the total community and those who hold a distorted fear of a government "disarming" the populace constitute a powerful lobby against such recommendations. It's a certainty that state legislatures as a general rule do not have the intestinal fortitude to move quickly to adopt them.

But a safer society would result if the actions called for were implemented across the land. Argue as it will, the gun lobby can't convince us that handgun crimes would increase if the weapons were taken from private hands. The simple, obvious truth is that they would decrease.

And rather than giving the peoples' sanction to such crimes as pornography and marijuana use by eliminating the penalty for them, state governments instead would be freeing the machinery of law enforcement and justice to concentrate more effectively on the more serious crimes which have victims.

We don't hold great hope that the recommendations will be adopted on a wholesale basis. But perhaps with the imprimatur of a distinguished national commission as a catalyst, the painfully slow process of changing the national attitude will gain strength.

Prosecuting The Supplicants

More than 70 people have been arrested at the White House since July 6 in a continuing protest against the American bombing of Cambodia. Comedian Dick Gregory was among the latest arrested. He was charged with unlawful entry this week for kneeling in prayer among a line of tourists standing on the White House steps.

It doesn't say much for the state of mind of those souls in the White House, as besieged as they are, to have people arrested for engaging in prayerful protest.

Even if, as administration apologists will argue, those who knelt in supplication did so because they knew they would be arrested and the cause would benefit by the attendant publicity. The case may also be made that praying, even for a stop to the bombing, in itself is not offensive, but clogging the White House environs with kneeling bodies does present a security risk.

We're inclined to view the situation as did District of Columbia Superior Court Judge Charles W. Halleck, however. The judge presided over the cases of six women also charged with unlawful entry for praying at the White House. "To be singled out and prosecuted . . . to do no more than read a prayer from the Bible . . ." Halleck observed in disbelief. Agreeing with defense counsel that White House pressure had brought the women to trial, the judge said "I might not be able to keep the executive branch from prosecuting . . . but it's a judicial function to impose or not impose sentence. As a judge and as a human being, there's no way I'd have any of these people spend one day in jail."

The six defendants were not sentenced. Arresting protesters for praying at the presidential mansion is a far cry from, say, Czarist troops mowing down peasants and workers in front of the Winter Palace, but there is still a similar aroma of despotism arising from the White House act.

The signs are unmistakable that the last traces of self-assurance have deserted the President in the matter of warring against Cambodia. He will not tolerate even the mildest manifestations of doubt.

JAMES RESTON

The Agnew Press Conference

Washington — What this town has been hoping for recently is somebody, anybody in power, who would stand up and give plain answers to hard questions, and Vice President Agnew has finally done it.

When the Justice Department informed him officially that he was being "investigated" for using his influence and taking bribes on government contracts, he didn't duck for long behind legal barriers, but called a press conference and said it was a "damned lie."

He didn't hid for weeks or months behind "executive privilege" or issue proclamations about his "legal rights." After a short but unfortunate delay, he saw the reality: The headlines in the newspapers made him look like a crook, so he came out fighting.

The courts will decide later. Whether there was any wrongdoing in this case. The only point here now is how a public official should react when there is even a suspicion of wrong-doing, and Mr. Agnew demonstrated how to do it.

He didn't ask but told the President he was going to call a press conference at 3 o'clock the next afternoon. He didn't have a few "friends" in the press around to hear his story, but invited everybody, TV cameras and all. He asked for the tough questions, and he got them.

Had he ever taken any money from government contractors? No! Was there a problem about politicians and government contractors? Sure, he said. You would be "naive" if you didn't recognize it. Had he ever been offered a bribe to use his influence in public office? Yes, once when he was too inexperienced to know what was happening, but it had nothing to do with this case. Had he thought of resigning or standing down while these charges were going through the courts? Certainly not; he didn't believe he would be indicted.

He was cautious about committing himself to appear before a grand jury or about handing over personal papers to the courts, not for personal reasons, but because this obviously raised constitutional questions that also touch on President Nixon's problems in the Watergate case, but he insisted that he had nothing to hide, would make all relevant documents available at the appropriate time, and, while listening to legal counsel, would decide on his own what to do.

"I think the vice president of the United States should stand on his own feet," he said. "It really isn't that important what a president says, although I welcome the President's support . . . He has given me it, unequivocally . . . so I'm not spending my time looking around to see who's supporting me. I'm defending myself."

The contrast with President Nixon, who hasn't had a press conference during the Watergate crisis since last March 15, was unavoidable. So maybe something important is happening here, probably as a result of Watergate.

Even at the top of the Nixon administration, officials are beginning to speak out. The new attorney general, Elliot Richardson, didn't ask whether the Agnew "investigation" would embarrass the President or the vice president, but simply advised Mr. Agnew that he was being investigated for possible criminal action. Also, Mr. Richardson has instructed his colleague in the Justice Department to keep a careful record of anybody, including members of Congress, who try to influence decisions in the Department of Justice.

This new reporting system, designed to remove the Justice Department form politics, will "discourage approaches" by persons with improper motives, Mr. Richardson said, and it is interesting that he added that, "only news media represen-

A plaque in the center of Chicago's blustery, bustling business district marks the spot where his cabin stood. Jean Baptist Point DuSable, Chicago's first permanent settler, built it about 1784.

A frontier trader, DuSable built his home and a thriving trading post on the north bank of the Chicago River near today's Michigan Ave. Bridge, raised a family and became a man of wealth, power and influence.

Historians are divided over DuSable's origins, but the evidence indicates that he probably was born in Canada around 1750 of French-Negro parentage.

He first appeared in the Chicago area around 1779, after the British seized the territory from the French and set about consolidating their hold on it. Because of his French ancestry, DuSable had his problems with the British who once took him prisoner but later became convinced of his loyalty to the Crown and allowed him to trade freely with the Indians.

Between 1780 and 1784 DuSable apparently divided his time between the Pinery, a British outpost near what now is Port Huron, Mich., Chicago and a farm he owned in Peoria.

In 1784 or a few years thereafter DuSable moved his family from Peoria to his trading post in Chicago.

He was married to a Potawatomi Indian named Catherine who bore him a daughter, Susanne, and a son, Jean.

DuSable's outpost became a popular supply point for white trappers, traders and woodsmen and for Indians with furs to barter.

British officials referred to

They Had A Dream

DuSable as a "handsome Negro" and "well educated." Others who wrote of meeting him on their journeys said he was a "large man, wealthy and he drank freely."

But whatever his habits, they did not interfere with DuSable's industriousness and business acumen. DuSable's daughter grew up and married. She had a daughter, the first child born in Chicago. DuSable's son struck out on his own, settling near St. Charles, Mo.

His children grown, DuSable sold his trading post in 1800 and left Chicago. An inventory of his belongings reveals he was a man of many talents and considerable means.

His settlement consisted of nine buildings. Among them were a mill where he ground his own flour and a bakery where he converted the flour into bread. He had his own workshop and a variety of farm implements with which he tilled the soil on a fairly large scale. His livestock included 30 head of cattle, 2 mules, 38 hogs and chickens.

DuSable moved to St. Charles and lived with his granddaughter. The last record of him was in a bankruptcy proceeding he filed in 1814. DuSable died shortly after and was buried in the St. Charles Borromeo Cemetery.

Separation Gap

Lincoln, Neb. Regarding the letter, "Journalists" (Star, Aug. 9) and the editorial column, "In Perspective," I wish to add a few lines of comment.

First, this country is in a separation gap, not a generation gap, as communications are public relations, and this includes information. Journalists, newsmen and many other professions are under strict code enforcements by their associations and subject to laws, as we all are.

Journalists are not all cartoonists and politicians are not all trained politicians. Most all of us have a profession and belong to a great American society as we choose. News releases should get to the people but they should be cleared in times which involve national security matters. Cartoonists are mostly employed by papers on a contract basis. They may be Republicans, Democrats or independents, but have a job to do and do it well.

Politicians should get political schooling and training in our schools and also training in foreign diplomacy to improve situations. Such training should be open to all, not a few. Candidates should sign authorized approval forms, and we should set up independent state and national boards of review. We should return our country to the two-party system, or disunity and communism will take over.

Thirteen men drafted our great American system, and men from 50 states can change it with amendments. Wherever people gather, there are differences, but with togetherness for all, there is unity.

Ode To Living

Lincoln, Neb. Hate not a person . . . nor love too deeply. Watch those experiencing these emotions . . . see them torn . . . and the victims.

Gather with no person . . . yet stand not apart. Watch those who huddle . . . those apart. See them trodden . . . and the victims.

Conquer no person, yet remain unvanquished . . . Watch those who would fight . . . see the blood . . . and the victims. Worship no person . . . nor accept worship. Watch those who forsake their God to worship a living . . . and the victims.

Each day past is a blessing to cherish. Each day present a blessing to enjoy.

Each day future, a blessing to anticipate. It is the days that make the living.

Blessing In Disguise

Bennet, Neb. We are living in changing times. Some changes are for the better and some for the worse. But change is sometimes difficult to live by.

The gas shortage means less globe-trotting and more walking. The beef shortage affects others besides meat-eaters. Laboratories use by-products of animals. Nothing is wasted but the squeal.

I wonder if many of us are not in a rut in our eating and drinking habits? But try to convince a man against his will and he's of the same opinion still.

What we swallow makes or breaks us. The body is a great healer if given a chance. It might take a crisis for man to see the light. We know of people in different parts of the world who eat little or no meat and are much healthier than we are and live longer.

Millions of dollars of our tax money go for trying to find cures for disease. But until we find and correct the cause, our money is wasted. Drugs only give relief.

If the gas and meat shortage teaches us that meat is not necessary and walking is more healthful, then the so-called crisis is a blessing in disguise.

Cambodian Bombing

Lincoln, Neb. "Death is irrevocable," stated Justice Douglas when he announced his ruling in relation to the halting of the bombing in Cambodia. Since his opinion was overruled, the bombing continued. A few days later, his statement became a horrifying reality as two bombing "errors" murdered and maimed innocent victims.

Why does this bombing continue? We are not at war with Cambodia. Certainly it is not in the act of saving Asia, for we are truly destroying it.

What is wrong with a President who flagrantly disregards the Constitution regarding Congress's right to declare war? Is it madness, ignorance or arrogance that leads President Nixon to his position?

Carl Rowan, a Washington news columnist, puts it most aptly: "Congress has given Nixon that August 15 deadline for bailing out of Cambodia. If the President doesn't recognize this opportunity to fully extricate this country from a course of madness, then heaven help him — and the rest of us!"

Mr. Varga's unusual angles brought out a depth to the photos which I know will be very pleasing to the girls who participated in the clinic. His pictures also showed the variety of dance routines which can be utilized in an activity of this nature.

Mrs. Olson's word pictures tied it all together.

Meat Industry Confab Gloomy Over Freeze

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Omaha — Predictions that President Nixon might announce the removal of the freeze on beef prices in a nationwide speech Sunday night failed to spread much cheer here in the final day of the National Live Stock and Meat Board annual meeting.

Several speakers including David Stroud, president of the board, and Dr. Kent Christensen, vice president of the Agricultural Council of the National Association of Food Chains, mentioned the possibility but apparently no one at the convention had any firm information that the freeze on beef would be lifted before Sept. 12.

"Five small packers have apparently been granted the right to pass through their increased costs of livestock to the chain stores which only further confuses the already bad situation," Christensen said.

Christensen said the government action was costing supermarkets in the New York area between $200,000 and $300,000 a week.

"The profit margins have shrunk to a half cent on a dollar's sale," he said. "At least 30% of the markets are now suffering a loss every day they stay open."

Position 'Poor'
"Even after Sept. 12, the retailers will be in a very poor profit position because no other costs can be passed along," he added.

Dr. Christensen pointed to the drop in the value of supermarket stocks on the stock market as another problem for the retail industry. "Our sources of funds to operate on are drying up as fast as profits shrink," he said.

William B. Arthur, executive director of the National News Council, told the board of directors and guests at the organization's banquet that the meat boycott had developed "because of distorted information to the consumer."

Arthur blamed the government's extension of the beef price freeze on the boycott.

"Neither the boycott nor the price freeze ever had a prayerful chance of accomplishing the avowed purpose of reducing the price of meat," Arthur said.

"These actions have created a situation in which prices inevitably must go up, beyond the level that would prevail in a free market. Both actions discouraged production. Both made it impossible for ranchers, feedlot operators and meat processors to make a reasonable profit. This forced the operations to shut down or operate at a loss," he said.

Good Effects
Arthur suggested some good side effects of an otherwise bad situation: "Consumers who stormed the barricades are learning some facts about the economics and marketing of meat," he said.

Arthur called for a free flow of facts from the meat industry to the consumer.

"You have a good story to tell, but it must be told credibly to command attention and to influence public opinion," he advised. "I favor a positive approach. A defensive stance invites defeat. Silence is construed as pleading guilty to the charges against you. A low profile persuades no one," he said.

"Only by seizing the initiative can you hope to open minds to the problems confronting the meat industry," he added.

The board apparently took Arthur's advice. A greatly expanded public relations program was launched at the meeting, along with an appeal for funds to finance it.

"Each dollar that can be identified as having come from beef will be used to promote beef; pork money will promote pork, and lamb money will promote lamb. Money from the meat packing industry will promote meat in general," explained John L. Huston, vice president of the meat board.

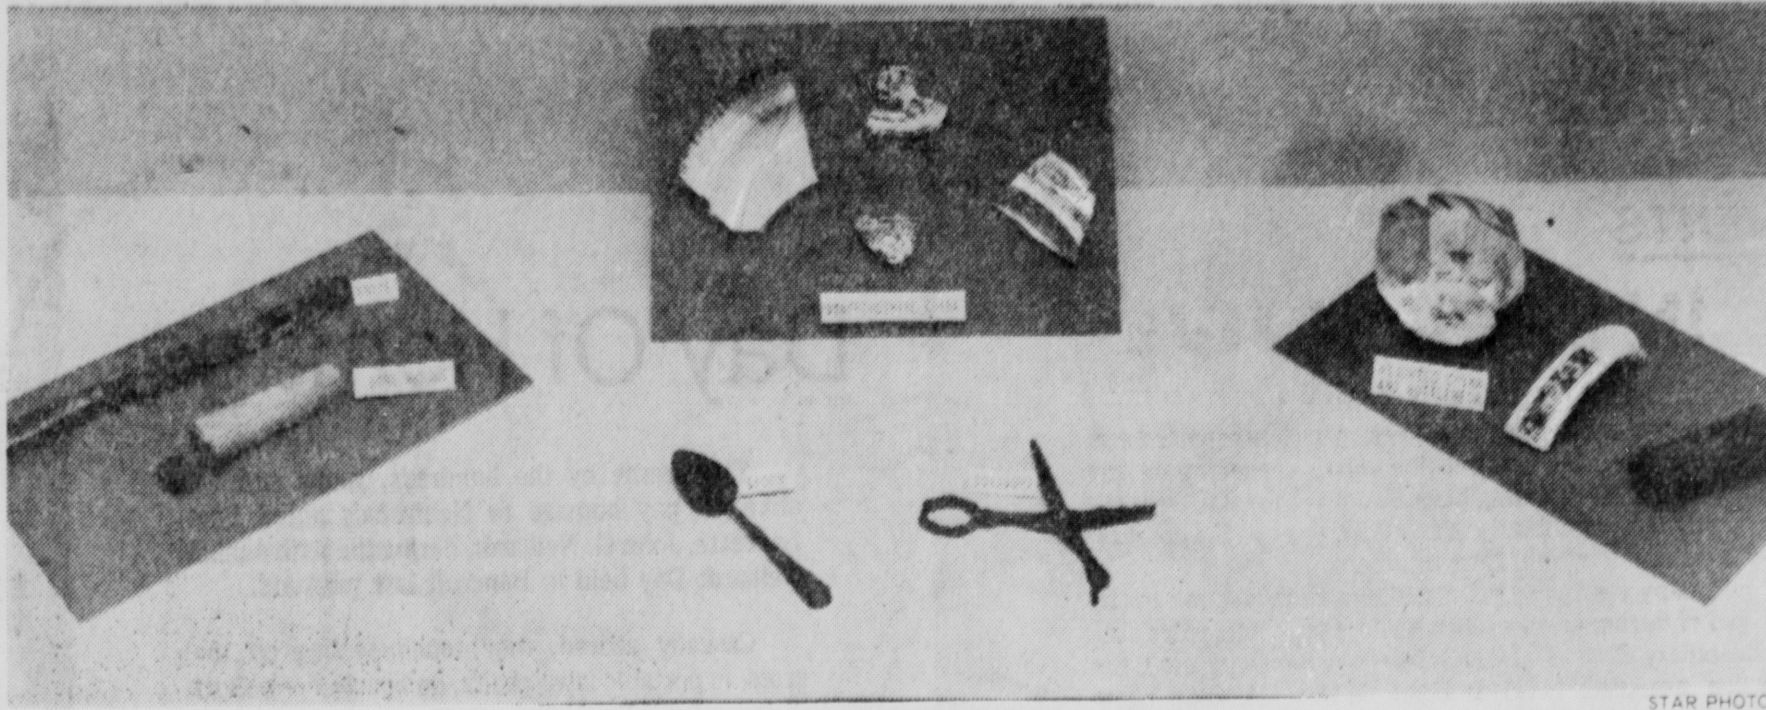

Chairman Elected
Peter E. Marble, cattleman from Deeth, Nev., was elected chairman of the Beef Industry Council of the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

He succeeds J. C. Holbert of Bettendorf, Iowa, who is retiring after 14 years as a Meat Board director.

Melvin O. Kuska, cattle feeder from Fairmont, succeeded Marble as vice president of the Beef Industry Council. Kuska is president of the Nebraska Beef Industry Foundation.

Gordon Cooper Jr. of Lambert, Miss., and Donald Sheetz of Washington, Iowa, were re-elected chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the Pork Industry Group of the board.

Sheepman John P. Miller of Des Moines, Iowa, was re-elected chairman of the Lamb Committee of the board.

HOUSEHOLD...early 19th century tools and chinaware discovered on the site of Fort Atkinson

Historical Fort Atkinson Brought To Life

By KEN GRAY
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Fort Calhoun — Secretary of War John Calhoun commissioned Gen. Henry Atkinson to lead the Yellowstone Expedition in 1819 to establish a line of forts from the Missouri River to the Yellowstone.

In June of 1820, Gen. Atkinson built a fort on a bluff overlooking the river, which 16 years earlier had been named Council Bluffs by Lewis and Clark on their expedition. They had parleyed on that spot with members of the Missouri and Otoe Indian tribes. Fort Atkinson was to become the largest military post in the West in its short history.

Last July 30, the fort reopened. Or, to be more accurate, the Fort Atkinson Historical Museum, located on the site of the fort, opened to the public Monday.

The historical museum is getting off to a slow start, being temporarily housed in a trailer, with only a portion of its artifacts and other materials on display. The displays include graphic illustrations in explanation of the site's history.

Abandoned in 1827
The fort itself, established for the benefit of fur traders in the unsettled territory, "and to assert American influence over the newly acquired land," was abandoned in 1827, said Steve Kemper, superintendent of the park.

"In its heyday, there were about 1,200 soldiers garrisoned here," Kemper said. The fort's walls encompassed 250,000 square feet, and "we know of 52 buildings that stood on the outside," he said. The 6th Infantry was the primary unit headquartered at the post.

The site boasts of many Nebraska firsts — the first western military outpost, the first school, sawmill and gristmill.

Through the cooperation of the Nebraska Historical Society, a number of artifacts from those 1820s days have been uncovered, and "we've really nailed down the exact limits of our fort here," Kemper said.

Kemper said the State Game and Parks Commission will ask the Legislature for funds to cover more archeological work, and eventual restoration of the west wall of the fort. As the barracks of the fort would have been built against the walls, the parks department plans to locate a reception center, audio-visual facility, a permanent museum and authentic recreations of officers' and enlisted men's barracks along the inside of the reconstructed wall.

Cornier Bastions Restored
Having located the boundaries of the original fort, which was in ruins shortly after the Army deserted it (it is believed to have burned down), the state has restored the corner bastions in their exact locations. The bastions were strongholds used as the last line of defense in case the fort was attacked. The west gate, but further construction depends on future financing.

The entire site, no longer overlooking the river, which has moved three miles east in the ensuing 150 years, was purchased through a cooperative effort of the Fort Atkinson Foundation in Fort Calhoun, and the Game and Parks Commission.

Another development on the site, which won't be ready for at least two more seasons, is the seeding of the area in front of the west wall with native grasses, to provide a more authentic look to the reconstructed fort.

The temporary museum is open to the public free of charge from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, and noon to 7 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

Cattlemen Fear Change In Taste

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—A change in meat eating habits to include a definite taste for chicken, pork and fish is something that cattle industry officials fear.

"Very definitely we are concerned about a change in their (consumers') eating habits," said Don Magdanz, executive vice president and treasurer of the National Livestock Feeders Association.

"That's one reason we are fighting so hard to get the administration to take the restriction (the price ceiling on beef) off," he said.

"If people find they can get along without beef and with something else, when the ceiling goes off some of them are apt to continue these habits."

"In the long run, there has been enough of a taste developed for beef that they will come back to it...but they might not come back immediately," he said.

An economist for a Nebraska meat packing firm said if the ceiling was lifted now, "what we'd probably see is an increase in live cattle prices. Price could go up to $60 (a hundredweight) on live cattle. They would stay up for two or three weeks, then decline to the mid 50s."

"If the ceiling stays on to the Sept. 12, what you might see is that prices may drift on up a little bit but you may not see a price surge."

He noted the number of cattle slaughtered declined 20,000 in one week, a "pretty sharp decline that indicates that there is some holding back of cattle."

As the supply tightens, the economist said, "you run a risk of getting a customer accustomed to having less beef so that when the ceiling is lifted the demand may not be as strong."

He said the housewife is growing accustomed to not having beef in the market, plus "there has been a considerable amount of stocking up by the consumer. When retailers are able to mark their prices up, the consumer may find the beef in their freezer cheaper and they'll go ahead and use it instead of buying" new supplies.

22 Pigs Stolen Near St. Paul

St. Paul (AP) — The Howard County sheriff's office has reported the theft of 22 hogs from a farm near Dannebrog. The hogs, valued at $960, were taken over a period of several days.

The sheriff's office said it would not release the name of the owner because of fear of additional rustling.

41 Dogs Slain On Kansas Farm

DIGHTON, Kan. (AP) — Verlin Shay's 20 oldest daughters wake up screaming in the night now. His youngest daughter is afraid to go to sleep following the shock the family endured returning home a week ago Thursday night from the Lane County 4-H Fair.

Forty-one dogs were dead or dying on the Shay farm five miles northwest of Dighton. The dogs were shot to death or poisoned, Mrs. Verlin Shay said Friday.

She and her three daughters have been raising registered dogs for seven years.

The dogs were shot in their pens and dog houses and then the killers entered the house to kill four house dogs, two of which were found dead on the girls' beds.

The Kansas Bureau of Investigation is helping the Lane County sheriff's office in the investigation into what might be one of the worst dog slayings in western Kansas history.

The loss was estimated at between $3,500 and $4,000.

"They didn't even have a fighting chance," Mrs. Shay said. "That's what irritates me. They were shot right in their pens. They weren't running loose destroying livestock. They weren't bothering anybody."

Pussycat Fined $100 Following May Police Raid

Omaha (AP) — Municipal Judge Elizabeth Davis Pittman has fined the manager of the Pussycat Theater in Omaha $100 in connection with a police raid May 17.

Judge Pittman found Richard Berry, 31, guilty of obstructing justice and resisting arrest, and fined him $50 on each count.

Police testified they entered the Pussycat theater on the night in question to determine if the film "Deep Throat" was being shown and Berry allegedly refused to cooperate, saying the officers had no warrant.

Patrolman William Crawford testified that he searched with Berry briefly in an arresting him.

A jury has since determined that "Deep Throat" was shown and was obscene.

Counter-Suit Filed To Allow Proposed CNTC Office Move

Hastings (AP) — A suit seeking the dismissal of an earlier order restraining the Central Nebraska Technical College Area Board (CNTC) from moving their administrative offices was filed in Adams County District Court here Friday.

In June, the board voted 5-4 to purchase nearly 43 acres of land south of Hastings.

The action was taken to implement the proposed move of the areas offices from here.

The board also voted to lease office space in the First Federal Building in Grand Island until the new offices could be completed.

Board members said they thought the move would put the offices in a more neutral location.

However, a group of Hastings area residents, led by Hastings industrialist L. Dale Watley, filed a petition seeking to stop the proposed move.

They contended that the vote by the CNTC board had not been approved by the state board as required under a law which went into effect July 1.

District Court Judge Norris Chadderton granted the motion for the injunction, but did not set a date for hearing on a proposal for the permanent injunction.

Shortly after granting the request, the judge left for vacation. In the interim period, the state board met and approved the CNTC board's action for a one-year trial period.

The counter-suit, filed by the Lincoln law firm of Cline, Williams, Wright, Johnson and Oldfather, contends that the Adams County District Court does not have jurisdiction over the matters in Hall County.

Judge Chadderton was still on vacation, and no date was set for a hearing on the new petition.

Chadderton is expected to return to the bench late this month, but the hearing is not expected until next month.

Ousted County Sheriff May Return To Office

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Sary County Sheriff Richard D. Whitted Jr. was ousted from office Friday by an order from District Judge C. Thomas White.

However, the ouster was expected to be short-lived because the Columbus, Neb. judge said he would permit Whitted to hold office if he will post a $10,000 bond pending his appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Whitted, 38, who pleaded guilty in November to perjury before a federal grand jury, said he expected to have the bond.

Immediately after White's decision, citing a previous case, Sary County Atty. Dixon Adams said he would file a motion before the State Supreme Court asking that the bond be vacated.

Miss Hahn Receives $300 Scholarship

Deborah Hahn, a 1971 graduate of Lincoln Northeast High School, has been awarded a $300 scholarship from Lutheran Brotherhood, a Minneapolis-based fraternal insurance society.

The scholarship is one of 50 awarded to Brotherhood contract holders, dependents and beneficiaries who plan careers as registered nurses. Deborah, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Hahn, plans to attend Bryan School of Nursing.

3 Lincoln Students Given Scholarships

Three Lincoln youths have been awarded $200 scholarships to attend Nebraska Technical College at Millard by the Cornhusker Kiwanis Club of Lincoln. The recipients are: Wyle Brunken, son of Mrs. Ella Brunken, William Buell, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Buell, and James Wood, son of Mrs. Shirley Wood.

The Kiwanis Club selected Terri L. Polk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Polk of Waverly, as the first alternate.

Goal Realized Half-Century Late

Deshler — Roy Godding recently attained a personal goal that had been postponed for half a century. The 72-year-old retired construction worker completed requirements for a high school diploma. He received a certificate of high school equivalency from the State Department of Education. "I did it for my own self-satisfaction," said Godding, who dropped out of high school at his boyhood home of Jewell, Kan., after one semester.

Stuhr Museum Sets Attendance Mark

Grand Island — Another attendance record has been set at the Stuhr Museum, according to executive director Jack Learned. He said 14,802 visitors were logged in July, topping the previous all-time high of 14,453 in July 1972. Attendance from Jan. 1 to July 31 totaled 42,499, compared to 31,495 for the same period last year. Learned reported that 48 members were signed in July, bringing the total museum membership to 1,490.

New Beef Industry Opens In Snyder

Snyder — The newest area industry began operation recently here when Quality Steaks Inc. slaughtered its first beef. The new business has 14 employees who prepare meat for the Mister Steak Restaurant chain. Vice president Glenn Knopasek said as production increases, the number of employees will reach 40 or more.

No Explanation Found In Fowl Play

Anselmy — Mrs. Harold Story was out of town for the day and returned home to find that about 40 of her spring fryers were dressed for the freezer — but it wasn't planned that way. A neighbor discovered the pile of 40-odd chickens, still warm, and realized that something had to be done. She enlisted the help of six neighbors who cleaned them. No logical explanation was found as to why the chickens flocked together to the point of suffocation. One theory was that a low-flying plane might have frightened the birds. Mrs. Story said, "We've got a hoot-owl in the yard that might have had a hand in things."

Ashland OKs $48,000 Budget

Ashland — The City Council has approved a city budget of $48,480 exclusive of bond interest and principal. That compares to $35,500 plus bond retirement last year, when the mill levy plummeted from about 33 to about 11 mills. The new taxable valuation of the city is reported at $3,357,895, which means one mill will raise $3.358.

Lincolnite Tabbed As School Principal

Emerson — Jack Rohrberg of Lincoln has been hired as high school principal for the 1973-74 school term. He will begin his duties Aug. 13. Rohrberg, an Osmond native, earned his bachelors and masters degrees from Wayne State College and his six-year certificate of specialization from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. He has taught in the Lynch, Neligh and Orchard schools in Nebraska and in Council Bluffs, Iowa. A former principal of David City and Pierce High Schools, he worked with Student Talent Search, a federal program based in Lincoln.

LIFE BEGINS AT FORTY:

People See Varying Solutions To Everyday Social Problems

By ROBERT PETERSON
We're all biased and prejudiced. We see varying solutions to everyday social problems whether they relate to youth or age.

Last week I watched a television symposium on juvenile delinquency and noted that each participant had a pet theory. One blamed the parents. Another felt the schools were at fault. Still others blamed lack of recreational facilities, permissive courts, and liberal sexual attitudes. One middle-aged panelist even postulated that the Russians were behind our rising rates of crime and delinquency.

The following day I attended a state conference on problems of older people. Here again, each participant had chosen a scapegoat for the so-called vicissitudes of age, based on his background, beliefs, and experiences.

$400 per month per recipient, the problems of our elder citizenry would disappear overnight.

The next speaker was a physician who documented the health problems of elders in such clinical and imaginative detail that I felt myself developing symptoms for every disease mentioned. His remarks suggested that if only we had more funds for medical research, and improved hospitals and nursing homes, society would thus compactly and neatly solve the major problems of aging.

Then a minister enumerated the satisfactions of religion, and declared bluntly that contentment was only possible for those elders with faith. He discounted money and health as major factors, and claimed that if only elders try such purposeful pursuits as painting, woodworking, stamp collecting, bowling and contract bridge. "Hobbies," he declared, "can solve the problems of aging."

Following this round-up of solutions to the problems of aging, the chairman closed the proceedings by presenting his personal opinion that more face-to-face friendly visiting programs would solve a majority of problems among the elders. He felt that all healthy elders in communities should be organized and recruited into teams of members who would go out and make personal calls on a regular basis to those past 65 in the community.

As was evident from this program, there are a myriad solutions to the problems of older people, and the solution which makes the best sense for a majority seems to be largely dependent on the inclinations and wishes of who's talking.

All of us will encounter some problems as we grow older and enter the golden years, and the more we know about these problems and their solution the better equipped we will be in coping with them.

If you would like a booklet, "The Advantages of Growing Old," write to Robert Peterson, Dispatch Letter Service, 25 W. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10036, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents to cover handling costs.

DR. NEIHARDT . . . addresses followers.

Day Of Homage

They came by the hundreds, young and old alike, to pay homage to Nebraska's noted Poet Laureate, John G. Neihardt, during the sixth annual Neihardt Day held in Bancroft last weekend.

Casually attired, they found seating on the grass, in portable lawn chairs, on benches — a short distance from Dr. Neihardt's Prayer Garden which adjoins the home in which he once resided.

Beneath a blazing August sun, program participants honored the poet with words, music, interpretive dance.

And then, as the audience sat in mesmerized silence, the 92-year-old writer concluded the festivities by reciting two of his poems, and the lyric "Black Elk's Prayer" — his only accompaniment the summer wind that whispered over his beloved prairieland.

SURROUNDED . . . by friends, family, the poet listens to a speaker.

VAL PETERSON . . . former governor, greets Dr. Neihardt.

A HANDSHAKE . . . brings Dr. Neihardt closer to one of his fans.

ENJOYING . . . the ride, Dr. Neihardt is carried in chair.

"BLACK ELK'S PRAYER" . . . highlighted Dr. Neihardt's presentation.

Lincoln Gays Fight For Acceptance As Human Beings

By JERRY IDOUX
Star Staff Writer

"Gays aren't human beings, they're sexual beings."

That's the stigma that Keith and his friends are trying to fight in Lincoln. And while they still hold hope for eradicating that attitude, they foresee many obstacles.

Keith and his eight friends spent three hours one Saturday morning talking candidly to an outsider about the problems, pressures and anxieties that gay life in Lincoln brings.

"I mean, my God, we're people," Karen, a 23-year-old graduate of UNL, said about the relationship between gay people and straights (those who are predominately heterosexual).

"If you tell somebody that you are gay immediately they conjure up some sexual picture of you," the bright-eyed scholastic honor winner said. "That's just not the case most of the time."

Gays face almost insurmountable pressures from the straight world — labels, ostracism, discrimination and probably most important of all, misunderstanding.

"It's easier to handle people when you label them. Most people when I walk into a bar don't think of me as a person — just as some sexual being that exists in their minds, some conjured image that they have been programmed to come up with. I'm tired of fighting with it," the outspoken Karen declared as the group nodded in agreement.

Gay men face the same labels from the straight world, said Randy, a student at UNL.

"If somebody (who is straight) knows that you're gay he thinks of you as effeminate. People just don't take you for what you are as a person," he said.

"It's sort of like an interracial marriage. Pressures can easily break the relationship up."

John, who sports a beard and travels about town on a motorcycle, explained it a little further. "There is always pressure on men to be 'Marlboro Men', for them to be the typical masculine type. When they don't fit into that category, they are scorned by others. Unfortunately gay men don't always fit that category, they are scorned by others. Unfortunately gay men don't always fit the 'Marlboro' description of the straight world."

It's not enough that people look down on gays, they said; but discrimination against gays is prevalent — from job discrimination to ostracism in public places.

One gay woman refused to come to the Saturday morning interview because she feared for her job if her identity was disclosed. While that may seem like an idle fear, everyone who participated said that such occurrences were commonplace.

Others who attended the session refused to take part in the conversation, most out of the same fear. A fear that grips every employed gay.

In fact, Randy claimed that he was discriminated against at his job after his employer found out he was gay.

He said that he was abruptly demoted from his position and received a lower wage after his sexual preference was known, almost by accident.

"I mean, my God, we're really people."

"You learn to be many people (when you are gay). You have to be aware of the possibility of employment termination, and you usually don't let on that you're gay at work simply because you might get fired," explained Karen.

Karen is in a better position than most of the other people who discussed gay problems that Saturday.

A few days after the meeting, she left Lincoln to take a job as a social worker. Her employers knew in advance that she was gay.

"I'm sure they considered it a plus," she said sourly. "Now they've got their token gay."

A newcomer to the gay scene, Pat, who was divorced after 13 years of marriage, also faces few pressures on the job. She works at the university and most of the people she associates with in her work realize that she prefers women over men.

She said that she doesn't try to hide her preference; but never brings it up in a conversation.

"It's easier to handle people when you label them."

The others circled around the floor expressed a need to hide their gayness from associates and employers. Some for fear of losing a job; others fear that they may lose the few straight friends that they have.

Straight friends are not very common among the group however. Very few of them acknowledged having any.

(Gay life is a lonely life if you don't have friends, they added.)

"Because of the attitudes straights have, you're forced to associate with gays," Pat explained.

These condescending attitudes are held by the vast majority of the public, the group maintained.

They said that a local bar actively discriminates against gays. The bar discourages attendance by persons who prefer members of their own sex.

And of course, gay couples can't hold hands in public without the fear of being ridiculed or ostracized, they observed.

There wasn't anyone in Lincoln where members of the same sex could dance together until a gay coffeehouse was organized a few years ago.

Now most of the gay couples go the coffeehouse if they want to dance.

And the coffeehouse answers another complaint that gays have about Lincoln. It offers them the opportunity to meet other people who are same-sex oriented.

Many times as many as 100 people attend the coffeehouses, Keith said. But he was quick to add that Lincoln's gay population was probably much higher than that.

Before the sessions were organized most of the gay activity was forced underground — in rest rooms and public places. Now gay people can relax during the informal coffeehouses without fear of ridicule or discrimination, they said.

There's always the threat of violence that lurks over the gay lifestyle, and the coffeehouse takes some of that fear away they said.

John was the only person there who had ever had a violent experience with someone he had picked up. Fortunately, he said, he was just ruffed up.

Violence in Lincoln seems to be on the increase and Randy is a little more cautious than the others.

"I'm really scared. I mean it's really getting serious. You can't even go cruising (looking for prospective partners) without being in danger," he said.

Most of the violence, they said, comes when a straight acts gay in order to lure the cruiser into picking him up. After that the result is often a beating for the unsuspecting cruiser and sometimes death.

Then there is the chance that someone might turn you in to the police if you approach him, Randy said.

Public disclosure of a person's gayness seemed to bother the group, and arrest would be one of the quickest ways to force that disclosure.

There is a possibility that this fear may be absorbed for gays in Lincoln, they said. A bill has been introduced in the Legislature that would permit sexual acts between consenting adults.

The bill, the group said, would set the age of consent at 15 for homosexual acts and 16 for heterosexual activity, if one of the persons involved is three years older than the other. Otherwise there would be no age stipulation.

Keith noted that the gay action group on the campus was doing some lobbying in support of the bill and was hopeful that it would be passed at the next session of the Unicameral.

There are also the family pressures that pop up once a gay's sexual preference is revealed. Three of the people at the interview had informed their parents of their attraction to members of the same sex.

After a period of initial shock that followed the "revelation" most of the parents began to accept their child's preference. Mothers are usually the first to acknowledge the sexual choice of their offspring, the three found.

"While my mother has accepted the fact that I'm gay," Keith remarked, "my father has refused to admit it. When I told him he actually cried. It was the first time that I have ever seen my father cry. Since then he just refuses to talk about it!"

The others were either far enough removed from their parents that disclosure wasn't necessary or had hidden their gayness from them.

Karen, probably the most outspoken of the group, had chosen the latter.

Because of my sexual preferences, "I've had to abort myself from my parents," she lamented.

Parents have a hard time accepting the fact that their children have grown up and have sexual desires, the group decided. It makes it even harder for them to cope with when they find out that their son or daughter is gay, they said.

"Now they've got their token gay."

"They are plagued with guilt feelings," Keith said. "They feel that somehow they've failed and that their children are not fulfilling the goals of society (by bringing forth children)."

Some feel their children have taken the easy way out.

"It's not easier to be gay," the 36-year-old Pat said in discounting the cop-out attitude that some straights place on gays. "It's just as hard to have a meaningful homophile (a description she prefers to gay) relationship as it is to have a so-called straight one."

The three women who participated in the conversation agreed that if a gay woman ever met a man whom she could get along with, she should abandon the gay life and marry him.

Not, they said, that it would be more fulfilling, but that it would be an easier life.

"Society's pressures make it tough," Keith commented. "It's sort of like an interracial marriage. Pressures can easily break the relationship up."

But the group felt that the rewards a meaningful relationship can bring justify the lifestyle and the desire to keep on trying.

"The biggest thing (that a gay relationship) can do is to relax any worries about male-female conquests," Pat said. "That allows you to form a closer, much deeper relationship," she suggested.

"There's a spacey, open, neutral ground that separates a man from a woman," she continued, "a ground that never gets crossed."

People of the same sex have the edge on heterosexual couples when they attempt to bridge that gap, she said.

The men agreed with her observation. The predominance of sex roles in straight relationships bothers them. While they still find role playing in gay relationships, it isn't as well defined as it is in a straight relationship, they said.

There's always the threat of violence that lurks over the gay lifestyle.

"Of course, there are still the decisions as to who'll do the dishes or clean the house," Randy chimed in. But he was quick to point out that this happened in every relationship gay or not.

For Keith, gay life also means the opportunity to relate closely with someone.

Simply because he and his lover (a term that most gays shun around straights because of its effect) are both men, they have a greater insight into each other's feelings and desires, he feels.

Of the nine people who were there, only Keith and Gayle, a recent Lincoln arrival from Colorado, had been involved in lasting relationships. Keith and his lover have been together for almost two years while Gayle lived with another woman for three years before coming to Lincoln.

The others said they go through sporadic relationships, some lasting a few months, others a few weeks.

The brevity of the relationships are often blamed on public pressures, other times on individual reasons, they said.

But even the frequent one night stands are worthwhile for them.

Because of my sexual preferences, "I've had to abort myself from my parents."

"They (the one-nighters) make you go away with a good feeling about the way you treat one another," Randy reminisced.

It's just that feeling, those attitudes that make gay life in Lincoln worthwhile for the group — despite the problems they face.

And so they'll continue to live their gay lifestyles, seeking that meaningful relationship that will justify it all.

Keith seemed to sum up the group's opinion before departing. "Being gay means a lot more to me than just the fact that I'm attracted to men."

55-Year-Old Widow Is Finally In Love

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think me foolish, but I am a 55-year-old woman (widowed nine years) and I have fallen in love for the first time in my life. (My mother picked out my first husband, and my one regret was that SHE never had to live with him.)

This man I love (I'll call him Bob) was separated from his wife when we met. He says he loves me and I believe him, but he keeps going back to his wife. He is 58, but his physical condition is like a 30-year-old.

Right now Bob says he is definitely going to file for a divorce. I asked him when, and he said, "Not until Nov. 19, because our 25th wedding anniversary is Nov. 18th, and I don't want to slap her in the face before then."

What is wrong? I bend over backwards to please this man, but I must be doing something wrong because after loving him for two years, I still don't have him.

A CONN. MESS

DEAR MESS: If you ever land Bob you will have a very considerate husband. Be patient until after his 25th wedding anniversary, and if he doesn't make the break then, come Thanksgiving, cook his goose.

DEAR ABBY: First of all, let me tell you that I have five children. My husband and I are getting a divorce and he can't help me, so I am going to have to raise these children alone. After my husband left, I found out I was pregnant. I am too far along now for an abortion.

I don't want this baby. Can I give it up for adoption? I have given this a lot of thought and have decided if I were to keep it, it wouldn't be fair to the five children I have, nor to the one that's on the way.

I believe every child should have two parents who really want it. Please don't give me a lecture. My mind is made up. Just tell me where to go to give it away.

NEEDS HELP NOW

DEAR NEEDS: No lectures from me. I agree, every child should have two parents who really want it. Sometimes, one is enough.) Get in touch with your County Welfare Information Center. Also, ask your doctor for guidance. There are plenty of couples who desperately want a child.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single girl living in New York City. I have my own car and I am dating a guy who doesn't have a car. It takes about an hour and fifteen minutes from his house to mine using public transportation, but it's only 15 minutes by car.

I find myself in the position of picking him up and taking him home whenever we go out.

Compounding the problem is the fact that I must use the toll bridge to get to and from his house, which adds up considerably for me.

I find this a very difficult adjustment as I have been accustomed to having my dates pick me up and take me home. Should I continue this pickup and delivery service? He's not a native New Yorker, and is afraid to take the subway late at night.

DOOR TO DOOR SERVICE

DEAR DOOR: Thirty minutes

in an automobile beats two and a half in a subway, no matter who does the driving. If he hasn't offered to pay for the toll, suggest it. If he can't or won't pay for it, you will have to decide whether dating him is worth the portal to portal service you're providing.

DEAR ABBY: Our fine, handsome grandson is graduating from college soon, after which he is marrying a nice girl he met at college. (I'll call her Mary.)

Mary is one of 12 children so there wasn't much money for extras in her family. To get to the point, Mary is desperately in need of dental work. It would improve her appearance 100 percent.

I can well afford to pay for any dental work Mary needs done, but I don't know how to make the offer to our grandson without offending him. It is a wonder to us how this girl could have let her teeth get into such bad shape. And a greater wonder that our grandson wouldn't have noticed it. (Or perhaps he has, but didn't know what to do about it.)

How can we let our grandson know we will foot the bill if Mary will see a dentist?

GRANDPA

DEAR GRANDPA: Tell him

Allen-Randall Marriage Told

Miss Jennifer Kay Allen of Columbus and Mark Randall of Denver, Colo., were married in a candlelight ceremony Saturday, Aug. 4, in Columbus.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Allen of Columbus and M. R. Traver of Lakewood, Colo., and Mrs. Sharon Groven of Littleton, Colo.

Miss Michalee Allen, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Janine Traver, sister of the bridegroom, of Littleton, Colo., Miss Loma Baxa of Lincoln and Miss Debra Blatchford of Columbus.

Jerry Figlio of Dallas, Tex., served as best man and groomsmen and ushers were Steve Schleu of Denver, Robert Snively of Grand Junction, Colo., and C. Thomas Lotko II of Kansas City, Kan.

A garden reception at the bride's home followed the wedding. After a honeymoon in the Oxards the couple will make their home in Lincoln. Mr. Randall is a senior at the University of Nebraska College of Architecture. The bride attended UNL.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR

Forecast For Saturday

Taurus hold tight to a belief. It is difficult to shake these natives from preconceived notions. Many astrologers insist that Taurus is plainly stubborn, intransigent. However, on the positive side, these persons are loyal and determined, reluctant to give up something for nothing. Taurus possesses a natural vitality, an enthusiasm for life. Persons who are most likely — and equipped — to understand Taurus are those born under Cancer and Pisces. Those who resist Taurus — and meet resistance in return — are Leo and Aquarius. Capricorn finds Taurus physically attractive. Virgo is fascinated by Taurus in an intellectual way. Scorpio might marry Taurus, and Aries can make money with one born under the sign of the Bull.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What appears to be an adversity could be a stimulating challenge. That should be your attitude — accept and overcome. One who is respected associate is on your side. This may not appear so from surface indications, but you will understand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Examine and investigate. Refuse to be satisfied with the superficial. Ask questions. Review evidence. Give full rein to intellectual curiosity. You do have right to know. Gemini, Virgo persons seem to be in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid overspending. Be a comparison shopper. Genuine article is available at realistic price. Know it and keep looking. Mate, partner, can aid in money dilemma. Be diplomatic. You will get insight from surprise source.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Conditions at home will be exciting, even if unsettled. You will be trying to perceive, to understand motives of one close to you. Don't be too quick in passing judgment. Take time to analyze. Hold back on definite commitment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You get more responsibility. There also is more money available. Capricorn, Cancer persons could be in picture. Mate, partner has unorthodox plan. Give a fair hearing.

Older individual is ready, willing to back you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are completing, assignment. It would be premature to jump into new area. Wait and see. Look beyond the immediate. You will soon find better means of distribution. Cash flow is due to improve.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Dynamic action is possible, which sets you upon a more independent course. Be sure you have solid base. Then proceed with confidence. Young persons lend vitality. You settle disagreement with loved one. You get second chance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): One who usually is dependable — and predictable — could surprise with behind-scenes maneuver. Be ready to protect your interests. Guard your side of story. Be sure your meanings are clear. Some have tendency to misquote you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): There could be loophole where financial matter is concerned. Find different methods. Be versatile. Gemini could play significant role. What you acquire may be at a distance. Check lines of communication.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are rewarded for taking dynamic, direct action. Much that had been holding you back is removed. Could be clear sailing if you know job from bottom to top. Otherwise, you will be called upon to review some lessons.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your ability to learn is tested. You generally are what is termed a "quick study." This will prove uniquely beneficial. Ask questions — apply knowledge. Open dialogue with member of opposite sex. Message can be of special importance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friends may act in unorthodox manner. Refuse to become involved in unseemly behavior. You need not be a grudge — but neither is it necessary to cast all dignity aside. Adhere to principles. You'll be happier as result.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intuitive, a natural teacher, generally unorthodox, willing to experiment and dramatize. Travel and an accelerated social life indicated for September. You attract persons born under Leo and Aquarius. You have knack of getting along with children. You inspire confidence. You are a fascinating, stubborn, unique individual.

Discover your love and money mates! Send birthdate (for our survey) and 75 cents to Omarr Astrology Secrets, The Lincoln Star, Box 3240, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017. You'll find answers in Sidney Omarr's booklet, "Secret Hints Men and Women."

10 Hurt In Police Station Blast In County Down, No. Ireland

Belfast (UPI) — A bomb injured 10 persons, including patients in a doctor's office, when it exploded outside the police station at Newry in County Down, police said.

The explosive was planted by gunmen who hijacked a mail truck and drove up to the police station posing as post office workers, a spokesman said.

The girl clerk walking from the station saw a youth kneeling on the ground lighting a parcel and sounded the alarm, he said.

"Most of the police got into the yard or into the rear part of the station before the bomb exploded," he said.

The bomb extensively damaged the station and nearby houses and business buildings.

State Laws May Deprive Resident Aliens Of Jobs

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

State laws requiring applicants for various licenses and jobs to be a U.S. citizen or a naturalized citizen in some instances may deprive resident aliens of employment opportunities, Atty. Gen. Clarence A. H. Meyer said Friday.

And judging from recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions, Meyer said, such restrictions may be unconstitutional.

In a letter to Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers, Meyer suggested that Chambers' Government and Military Affairs Committee might want to examine Nebraska statutes containing such restrictions.

Application

The question arose recently when a resident alien applied to the state for a land surveyor's license. State law, however, states that all licensees must be citizens.

Meyer quoted a Supreme Court ruling which held that "a state which adopts a suspect classification (being an alien) 'bears a heavy burden of justification,' a burden which requires the state to meet certain standards of proof.

"In order to justify the use of a suspect classification, a state must show that its purpose or interest in both constitutionally permissible and substantial and that its use of the classification is necessary to the accomplishment of its purpose or the safeguarding of its interest.

"Resident aliens, like citizens, pay taxes, support the economy, serve in the armed forces, contribute in myriad other ways to our society. It is appropriate that a state bear a heavy burden when it deprives them of employment opportunities."

Revision Needed

Presumably, city and village restrictions on alien applicants might also need revision.

Meyer said he doubted whether many of the restrictions on aliens applying for licenses or jobs would meet that test of national or state security.

Meyer said a check with the Legislature's bill drafter revealed that as of December 1972, the word "alien" is mentioned 57 places in the statutes and the word "citizen" 107 times.

Meyer added, however, that some of those are election laws which would not be affected.

The requirement that the licensee or the job applicant be a citizen, Meyer said, must bear "a real and significant relationship to a significant government function."

Center's Shuffle Delayed

A pending administrative reorganization of the Student Health Center at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has been delayed till Sept. 15 to provide time for a search for the director of one of four new divisions.

Kenneth Bader, vice chancellor for student affairs, confirmed Friday that he had agreed to postpone the Aug. 15 implementation date for one month so the medical staff might participate in the search for the health center administrator.

The administrator will head one of the four divisions in the reorganization, which Bader said is designed to strengthen the center's administrative organization and clear up lines of authority.

Dr. Sam Fuenning, health center director, will become executive director of health services in the new arrangement. The four division heads will report to him.

Bader had been eyeing Tom Johnson, health center business manager, as likely candidate for the administrators' job, but several medical staff members said they would prefer an administrator with health services administration training.

Johnson is trained in personnel administration and accounting.

The Saving Leap

Detroit Police Sgt. Edward Saffold jumps to save the life of a Texas man who threatened to jump off an 11-story Detroit hotel. Saffold broke his ankle in the leap aimed at keeping Richard Ramirez, 21, of Fort Worth, Texas from jumping. The copyrighted photo by the Detroit News also shows a Roman Catholic priest and police field inspector Edward Widner who talked to Ramirez, left, while Saffold got in position for the leap. Ramirez said he was despondent because he was out of work. He had been talking to his mother on a phone brought to the roof when Saffold made the saving jump.

Hamburger Stand Operators Fear Beef Pinch During Fair

With beef in short supply, some operators of hamburger stands at the State Fairgrounds are going to play it by ear and hope to have enough beef to last through the 10-day State Fair.

According to John Schizas, manager of Brandeis Food Management at the State Fairgrounds, the concession stand at the grandstand and the Fair Cafe will have products to sell to the public even if the beef supply runs out.

Price, who has operated a stand at the fair for 35 years, said the last time he had any worries about getting beef was immediately after World War II.

Price said his beef will have no additives, such as soy meal, but due to the higher price of beef, most of the sandwiches will cost more this year.

The Capital City Kiwanis Club's Country Kitchen cafeteria will be open to sell "something, whatever the market offers," according to Maynard Brummer.

Brummer, who owns the Mr. B groceries in Lincoln, said some suppliers will withhold beef from the fair, in an effort to supply grocers. He said he is caught in the middle, trying to keep his groceries in stock with beef, yet attempting to help out the Kiwanis Club's cafeteria.

Nebraska Couples Now Have Smaller Families

Nebraska men and women are choosing to have smaller families, according to John McClendon, president of the Nebraska Chapter of Zero Population Growth (ZPG).

McClendon used figures from the State Board of Health which show that the number of first and second children born in each year has been rising during the last four years, and in contrast to this, the number of third, fourth, and later children being born has dropped continuously during this period, with an especially sharp drop in 1972.

McClendon asserts that this is an encouraging sign because it means that Nebraskans "are beginning to take more seriously their responsibilities toward their children."

Emphasizing that ZPG is not "anti-motherhood," McClendon said he believes equality of opportunity for parenthood is as important as other kinds of equality.

He said the decrease in larger families will permit more men and women to become parents without overtaxing resources. In this manner, parents can give every child born a chance to "grow up into as good a life as his or her parents had," he said.

Gering Packing Firm Charged With Violating Stockyards Act

Washington (UPI) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture said Saturday Gary Berta and Tige Enterprises, Inc., of Gering, Neb., have been charged with violating financial and payment requirements of the Packers and Stockyards Act.

The USDA said Berta was president, manager and principal owner of the firm, while Tige Enterprises was registered as a livestock dealer and market agency.

The firm formerly purchased livestock in Nebraska, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming, Missouri, Mississippi and Tennessee, but is not currently in operation.

USDA's Packers and Stockyards Administration charged in an administrative complaint that at times, from February through March, 1973, Tige Enterprises, under Berta's management had current liabilities exceeding its current assets by more than $95,000; failed to pay when due the full purchase price for more than $66,000 worth of livestock purchased in Mississippi, and still owes for the livestock; and issued more than $55,000 worth of insufficient funds checks in payment for livestock purchased in Missouri, and still owes for the livestock.

The USDA said filing of the complaint does not prove that the respondents have a right to a hearing to determine whether the evidence supports the charge.

Drive Is Planned To Save Building

KEARNEY, Neb. (AP)—A petition drive is to begin next week at the Buffalo County Fair here in an effort to save the Buffalo County Court house, which was built in the 1880s.

Construction is underway on a new county office complex, and when it's completed next year, the complex will almost completely surround the old courthouse.

A spokesman for the petition drive, Chan Lynch, Jr., the vice president of the Buffalo County Historical Society, said the majority of those working on the project are society members, but he said the society was not the only group involved.

He said a large number of local and area groups were interested in the preservation of the building.

Organizers are hoping to get several thousand signatures which will then be presented to the Buffalo County Board of Supervisors.

Lynch said if the group was topped there, they would try to get the issue on the ballot in the next general election.

According to Lynch, about 2,000 signatures, representing 10 per cent of the voters in the last election, would be required to get the issue on the ballot.

Those who are backing the drive want the building converted into a museum.

Teaching responsibility and how to be more thrifty are two major benefits of a newspaper route cited by the parents of Danny Abramson, Star carrier salesman at Holdrege.

Danny, who has had his route about six months, feels he has a good route and earns good money from which he is saving for a 10-speed bike, television and college.

The 13-year-old eighth grader at Holdrege Junior High plans to be a science teacher after college.

A sports fan, Danny plays football and guard for the junior high football team, plays basketball and enjoys swimming, bike hikes and making model cars.

He also plays the trumpet in the band and is active in church activities and Boy Scouts.

Being chased by dogs and getting one dollar bill for a daily paper are the unusual experiences on his route cited by Danny.

Danny Abramson

Teaches Responsibility

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Abramson, feel that his route has also helped him organize his time and to meet people.

Not Far From Main Street

Just for a minute, think about the local places you have loved... the old swimming hole, the town park, the walk by the river, the view from the hill—your church! Life would be so much less without them; yet we tend to take them for granted.

What a beautiful world God has created for us! How much He must love us to have given us shaded valleys and sparkling waters! He planned for us the constant variety of the changing seasons. For our enjoyment, He made trees and grasses, flowers and fruits. Before such miraculous inventiveness, science stands baffled and incredulous.

It is obvious that behind all creation there is a power greater than we, a power constantly concerned with man's development. In the church of your choice you will find the opportunity to give thanks for the gifts of creation. Here, too, you will learn to understand better the complexities of our world. You will find a faith that will sustain you throughout life.

'Ordinary Superstar' Rodgers Helping Boost Montreal

MONTREAL (UPI) — If it were possible to categorize superstars, then Johnny Rodgers of the Canadian Football League Montreal Alouettes would like to be known as "just an ordinary superstar."

That's what Rodgers considers himself to be after only two games of professional football in the CFL. But looking at his statistics, you would be inclined to go along with his superstar categorization.

Rodgers, who won the Heisman trophy as the top U.S. football collegian while at the University of Nebraska, came to Canada amidst massive publicity for his actions both on and off the field.

He established 15 records while playing football at Nebraska and tied or established four NCAA records. He scored 800 points and an amazing 50 touchdowns in his three years there and had an unbelievable average of 13.9 yards for every time he got his hands on the ball.

While Montreal fans have not heard much about his off-field activities, they have had the opportunity to see Rodgers do his thing on the gridiron and the results there have been excellent.

Rodgers, as adept at catching the ball as he is at running it, has already chalked up 199 yards of offense in only two games. Included in those yards were two touchdowns, both on passing plays from quarterback George Mira, another American who spent several years with the San Francisco 49ers.

While Rodgers thrills Canadian fans with his play, he still has a few things that he would like to change. For example, after his first game as a pro he complained that he hadn't been given a chance to get his hands on the ball enough times. He carried the football only five times and caught only two passes, one of which was good for a touchdown.

In the second game he carried the ball only once the first half and managed to pick up only one yard, but in the second half he rushed seven times and caught three passes for a total of 134 yards. He still was not completely satisfied that he had had the ball enough times.

"In college I used to get the ball a lot," he said. "But here I'm not getting it as much as I would like to. I need to get the ball a certain number of times to get my own confidence."

"I figure 12 times a game, which would be three or four times a quarter is not asking too much, especially of Canada's highest paid football player. If I don't get the ball then I can't score. All I want to do is earn my keep and justify the bread they put out for me."

Says Rodgers, "If they wait to give me the ball late in the game, then the defense will be waiting for me because they know that in a tense situation the other team is going to give the ball to their best ballplayer and they'll be waiting for me."

"But if I get the ball enough early in the game then the defense won't be able to sit back and wait for me because they'll never know when I'm going to get the ball."

After being named the first star in his last game against the Hamilton Tiger Cats, Rodgers discussed some of the changes he has found in the Canadian game of football with respect to the American game and why he chose to come to Canada instead of staying in the United States and playing there.

"I think one of the biggest changes in Canadian ball is the wider field and the longer end zones," he said. "I feel that with my speed, the wider field is to my advantage on the runs and the longer end zones are an advantage on the pass, so it's better for me here."

"Also, I was guaranteed to play here in Montreal, whereas if I'd have gone to the NFL I might not have the chance to play regular there," he explained. "I like to play football and I'll play anywhere they want me to. I'd even snap on punts if they wanted me to. I just want to play all the time."

So Johnny Rodgers has found himself a home where he thinks he will be a star for a long time and he is the first to tell you that.

"I'm just an ordinary superstar in this league and I think that I can stay that way for a long time. I think I can beat any defensive back one on one so, if I get the chance to, we'll win a lot of ball games and that's the most important thing I'm thinking about."

It's a long way from Nebraska to Montreal, but Rodgers has made the conversion to professional football extremely well, on his way to recognition as one of the most exciting players in the country, and the harder it gets for him the more he likes it. As he himself says, "when the going is tough, I'm great."

TWO SHARE PGA TOP ... Iverson, Rudolph Tied After 36 Holes

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Longshots Don Iverson and Mason Rudolph shared the 36-hole lead in the PGA Championship Friday, but Jack Nicklaus at long last appeared primed and in position to win that elusive 14th major title.

Nicklaus, who has failed five times since the 1972 U.S. Open to win another major championship and break his tie with the late Bobby Jones, moved within a stroke of the surprising leaders as he fashioned a three-under-par 68 despite putting problems.

But Arnold Palmer, whose putting woes make Nicklaus' look like nothing, shot a 74 and went home, missing the PGA's 36-hole cut for the first time in his brilliant career.

"It got so bad, it was funny," the 43-year-old golfing millionaire cracked with a wry smile on his face. "I couldn't even get mad anymore. It was ridiculous."

Iverson, the 27-year-old Wisconsin pro who shared the first round lead, and the veteran Rudolph had rounds of 72 and 70, respectively, Friday and were at 139 for 36 holes.

Nicklaus headed a runnerup trio at 140 as he hit 16 greens in regulation—barely rolling over the other two—made three birdies and 15 pars and announced he thought his time had come.

"Golf is a game of patience," said Nicklaus, whose bids in the Masters, U.S. Open and British Open this year all were wrecked by a single hideous round. "If you don't have patience, you keep missing those putts and all of a sudden you shoot 75 real fast."

The trio at 140 also included Gibby Gilbert, who built a second straight 70 around four straight birdies on the front nine, and resurgent Dan Sikes, whose 68 included a chip-in birdie three at the 465-yard 13th.

Three more players were just another stroke away at 141 including the incredible Tom Weiskopf, who birdied the tough 18th for the second straight day and shot 71.

He was tied with former U.S. and British Open champion Tony Jacklin, who also had a 71 with a putter he made himself, and 1970 PGA winner Dave Stockton, who shot 69.

Remarkable Sam Snead, hardly showing his age (61), provided one of the day's most dramatic moments when he surged into a tie for the lead midway through the back nine.

Mike Hill, Lanny Wadkins, Jim Colbert and club pro Bobby Brue were tied with Snead and about a dozen more players were at 143—putting virtually a third of the surviving field within four strokes of the lead and assuring a dramatic windup to this $225,000 event, last of the year's major championships.

Johnny Miller, the U.S. Open champion, was the biggest name of the 143's. Miller, who blasted the condition of the greens Thursday in the opening round, shot a 71 and announced he was pleased with the course.

"The greens were good," said Miller. "They were really fair."

Leading money-winner Bruce Crampton was another stroke back at 144, defending champion Gary Player was at 145 and Lee Trevino came in at 146 with a 70 Friday.

Iverson, playing in a major championship for the first time, started shakily when he caught a bunker at the third and missed the green at the fourth and took a bogey each time. He might have panicked and fallen off right there, but he had a little talk with himself.

"I figured on a golf course like this, that's no reason to push the panic button," said Iverson. He came right back with birdie putts of 40 and 15 feet on the next two greens and parred his way home except for a bogey when he bunkered his approach at 13.

Rudolph, so sick with a stomach virus most of the week he couldn't get in more than six holes of practice Tuesday and Wednesday, made three birdies, two bogeys and saved three other pars with long putts.

"Maybe that was the way to prepare for these major championships," Rudolph said. "Maybe I've been going about it all wrong."

Scoring generally was a little better than it was Thursday as calm air prevailed on a hot and sunny day at Canterbury, and there were no criticisms of the tree-lined, 6,852-yard course.

The 36-hole cut came at 149 and the victims besides Palmer, whose total was 150, included Gene Littler and Dave Hill, the noted golf course architecture critic who paid the old course its finest compliment.

"This is a good course," said Hill after failing to survive with 151. "There's nothing wrong with the course. I just played badly."

Results, page 15.

PGA Purse Raised

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The PGA announced Friday it was raising the purse for the PGA Championship from $200,000 to $225,000. The winner will receive $45,000.

Four Tied For Lead At Ager

Four youngsters go into Saturday's final 18 holes tied for the lead in the boys 14-15 division of the Lincoln Association of Life Underwriters Junior Golf Tournament at the Jim Ager Memorial Junior Golf Course.

Scott Carlson, Jerry Ficke, Mike Chapman and Jay Huston all have posted 36-hole totals of two-over-par 110 at the par-3 course.

Another Huston, Sue, holds a five-stroke lead over Susie Hergert in the girls 13-15 division with an 18-hole total of 68. They have only nine holes left to play Saturday.

The top four going into Saturday's final rounds:

Pro Raja, Merrill's Flight Top Lincoln Derby

Aunt Priscilla Gets Winner On 'Longshot'

I don't know what happened. I thought I would have decent odds on Magic Legend in the first race, but apparently everybody else did too. That little darling came in and paid $5.20 on my $2 investment.

Unfortunately, Persimmon Hill, my other selection in the eighth, had to contend with too much misfortune and finished fourth so I ended the day by winning $1.20.

Persimmon Hill was hit hard from the starting gate, forced to go wide on both turns, then was just plumb tucked out from all that to last in the homestretch.

That win, however, boosts my $108 spree fund to $68.60 and I'll try to add more to it with $2 win tickets on Bunny's Button in the fifth and that little darling who wrote me a letter, Kota Call in the eighth.

Three more players were just another stroke away at 141 including the incredible Tom

Saturday's Lincoln Derby, a mile chase for 3-year-olds, will pitch two familiar opponents against each other once again.

M. D. Van Patten's Merrill's Flight, who has drawn topweight of 120 pounds with Wayne Anderson as the designated rider, will vie against Pro Raja, owned by Ray Schuyler of Winner, S.D., for the winner's share of the $6,000 purse.

Merrill's Flight, a dark-brown gelding who captured the State Fair Handicap on July 28, lost a mile race at Ak-Sar-Ben earlier this year to Pro Raja, who has accounted for stakes victories at other tracks also.

In her last outing, Pro Raja won the South Dakota Derby at Park Jefferson in a race where no win, place, or show betting was allowed. But betters at the State Fairgrounds Saturday won't know until post time of the first race if that situation will exist for them.

At Park Jefferson, Pro Raja's entry in that mile-long Derby caused racing officials to allow exacta and quinella betting only. Pro Raja had to be taken with another horse, resulting in an exacta payoff of $25.00.

"We won't know until tomorrow (Saturday) what we'll do," state fair general manager Henry Brandt said. "If we do change the betting, we have to get permission from the racing commission to do so."

During that South Dakota victory, Fred Ecoffey made a special trip to the Park Jefferson track specifically to ride Pro Raja. At that time, the filly was topweighted, but this time he has drawn second topweight of 117 pounds.

But with Merrill's Flight, who finished second in his last outing in the State Fair Breeders' special allowance stakes, another mile run, running against Pro Raja, it is doubtful if the betting pools will be changed.

Alola will also carry 117 pounds despite losing three races to Merrill's Flight and two to Pro Raja in the past. In his last outing against Pro Raja, Alola finished four horses behind Merrill's Flight who was fourth.

Pro Raja would normally be required to carry 122 pounds, but she receives a five-pound allowance for fillies.

Gem. D.H., third to Merrill's Flight in the State Fair Handicap and fourth in the Breeders', will carry 112 pounds this outing.

Rounding out the field of seven are Amies Supreme (114) fifth in the Breeders', Shoula

Beam (109), and Miss Late Shade (111).

The horsemen, abiding by their agreement with the jockeys, filed their nominations for the five and one-half furlong eighth race scheduled for Saturday's card and, in designating the distance they wanted their chargers to go, had the race changed to six furlongs.

"We only received one entry for five and one-half," racing secretary Dean Williams said. "We had two that wanted to go the four furlong distance, but the rest wanted to go six."

"Under the agreement, since the five and one-half didn't fill, we went to the next and that was for six furlongs."

In Friday's feature race for 3-year-olds and older over six furlongs, Great Commander, ridden by Doug Schoepf, put together a stretch drive to come from five places back to win by a neck over Royal Whisper and John Rettele.

Great Commander returned $21.00, $7.60, and $4.00 to backers in the crowd of 4,896 while Royal Whisper placed for $5.00 and $3.60. Wild Wink showed for $3.60.

Shields Leads Aamco Over North Platte, 3-2

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Writer

Columbus — Although he opened with 6 2/3 innings of no-hit pitching here Friday in the first round of the state Class A Junior Legion Baseball Tournament, Marty Shields had to scramble to post his ninth win in 10 decisions.

The Lincoln Aamco right-hander used his curve ball masterfully through eight innings, but was forced to snuff out a ninth-inning North Platte rally in a 3-2 win.

The victory advanced the Northeast Capital City club to a 5:30 p.m. Saturday matchup with Omaha Dugdales (Benson High School), which outlasted Kearney, 1-0, Friday.

In Friday night's session, Omaha Millers defeated Omaha Gross, 7-5 and Millard scored twice with two outs in the ninth on a Columbus error to outlast the tournament's host team, 6-4.

Shields, who has already achieved two no-hitters since last spring, looked as if he might get No. 3 until North Platte pinch-hitter Terry Collins laced a two-out double to left field in the seventh inning.

First baseman Terry Dopp shared the heroics for Aamco. His first Legion homer, a 325-foot solo shot over the right field wall at Pawnee Park in the eighth inning, gave Aamco a 3-0 lead and proved to be the deciding run.

Shields seldom went to a fast ball. His breaking pitches had North Platte completely baffled enroute to a 14-strikeout performance.

"They couldn't touch his curve. You knew how much it was breaking when he strikes someone out, bouncing the ball over the plate," acknowledged Aamco coach Bill Fagler, whose club won its 12 straight game and 16th in its last 18.

Shields, who now complements his curve ball with a sinker instead of the knuckler he used so effectively last spring, helped his own cause by stroking a double to the left-center field wall, knocking home a sixth-inning run.

But North Platte, now 25-12 after having its 10-game winning streak snapped, nailed Mel Knopp trying to score on the same play and completed an unusual double play by also throwing out Shields enroute to third.

Two walks, a single and a pair of wild pitches had Shields in dangerous ninth-inning trouble when North Platte threatened with two runs.

But Shields bailed himself out, throwing out Collins, North Platte's pesky substitute, at third base and getting Brett Brase to ground out to second.

Walt Gall Succeeding In Transition To AAA

By STEVE GILLISPIE
Star Sports Writer

Walt Gall, headed by Dennis Kuenning and Othir Carrera, is one of two teams in the Lincoln Men's AAA Fast-Pitch Softball League that moved up from the AA League.

"We've been about 25-5 in the AA League the last three years, so we decided that we were good enough to compete in the AAA League," Kuenning, the team's manager and third baseman, says.

"We've been able to play .500 ball most of the season and we've been told that is a lot better than most teams do in the first year in the league."

Carrera, a native of Venezuela who is studying with the hope of becoming a doctor, and Kuenning, a pharmacist, met while working at the same hospital in Lincoln.

Although Carrera usually just coaches third base, he has been pressed into service when only eight players showed up for a game and played second base.

"I played baseball in Venezuela, but when I got to Lincoln two years ago there wasn't any baseball," Carrera recalls.

"After I met Dennis I decided to give softball a try and I've really enjoyed the game."

The team decided to try to move up to AAA last year, but couldn't get in until this year. "We thought we'd rather play better competition and maybe get beat, than continue to easily beat most teams in the league we were in," Kuenning says.

"After we were able to give two teams from the AAA League a close game in exhibitions, we voted to apply for membership and we've never regretted that decision."

The biggest difference that Walt Gall noticed between the AA and the AAA Leagues is pitching.

"About half the guys on our team have really had trouble getting used to the better pitching, but that'll get better with experience," Kuenning says.

"There is also greater unity on the teams in the AAA League than there is in AA and we're trying to make our team closer."

Carrera notes that the players who know each other quite well usually have better team work and know what to expect from each other. "We're even doing things away from Ballard Field together as a team," he says. "we've played volleyball games hoping to keep our unity."

"There is more pressure in AAA and the more unity a team has, the better it usually responds in critical situations and this is what we're trying to accomplish."

ENID, Okla. (AP) — A state legislator said Friday he has asked his attorney to prepare legal action against the Big Eight Conference for placing the University of Oklahoma on probation for recruiting violations.

"The recent Big Eight ruling that involved one of Oklahoma's tax supported institutions of higher learning was in my opinion a gross miscarriage of justice," state Rep. Tom Rogers said.

The state legislator said the ruling was unjust because the conference decision to ban bowl and television appearances by the Sooners punishes innocent people.

Rogers said it will punish "not only the handful of those who are guilty of infractions, but at least some 2½ million people who are innocent as well."

Among the innocent who are being punished "for the wrongdoings of a few," he said, are the OU athletes, the students of the school, the "innocent" sports fans of the university and the 2½ million tax-paying residents of Oklahoma.

Rogers added that while he has no sympathy for the guilty, he said he feels "that the rest of us have been grossly wronged by this unfortunate ruling."

"Therefore," the Enid Democrat added, "I have requested my attorney to commence preparation for legal action."

CHADRON, Neb. (AP)—Chadron High School basketball coach Gary L. Richy has resigned to become the new head coach at the Anoka-Remsey Junior College in Coon Rapids, Minn. Richy coached here for only one year, and led the Cardinals to an 11-9 record. Richy's resignation becomes effective immediately.

Glover Moved
To Tackle Spot

West Lombranch, N.J. (UPI) — A special press conference was necessary here at the New York Giants' training camp Friday as defensive coordinator Jim Garrett explained how he will overcome a manpower shortage on his front four against the New England Patriots Sunday night at Foxborough, Mass.

Nebraska all-American Rich Glover, who was ignored in the college draft until the giants picked him on the third round, will take over John Mendenhall's left tackle spot. Mendenhall will replace Stan Goich at left end to permit Goich to take over the right tackle spot that both former Husker all-American Larry Jacobson and Dave Tipton had to vacate due to injuries.

Completing the front four will be Carter Campbell as the rover. He will be filling in for Jack Gregory, who is missing because his wife gave birth last week to a premature son at Jackson, Miss.

Lincoln Athletes
Require Physicals

High school youngsters planning to participate in athletics at Lincoln's public schools are reminded by Virgil Horne, director of athletics for the Lincoln Public Schools system, that a physical examination is required.

Horne said the examination may be given by any physician at the student's expense and in order to check out equipment the student must have a completed physical exam form and a parental consent form, both of which are available at the school office.

Springfield (AP) — State Sen. Orval A. Keyes of Springfield says he may ask that a special session of the Legislature be called.

Three reasons cited by Keyes are connected with wage and price controls.

Keyes said he would suggest the Legislature petition the federal government to remove the ceiling on beef prices immediately. It is scheduled to be removed in September.

He said the same proposal would urge the government to remove the five and one-half percent wage increase ceiling.

Sun Ejects Earth-Sized Mass

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A huge mass of fiery material — larger than the earth — burst violently from the sun's surface Friday and was photographed by the Skylab 2 astronauts.

Scientists said the rare event, which occurs only two to four times a year, had never before been studied in such detail.

Dr. Ernest Hildner said the explosive phenomenon was a "magnificent specimen of its type." Hildner, of the high altitude observatory in Boulder, Colo., saw television pictures of the solar event transmitted to earth by Skylab.

Although it was officially their day off, Capt. Alan L. Bean, Dr. Owen K. Garriott and Jack R.

Lousma were advised of the solar burst after it was first noticed by astronomers in the Canary Islands.

Garriott, who is a solar physicist, and Bean immediately manned an instrument called a white light coronagraph, which blocks out the disk of the sun as in an eclipse. This allows the corona — the fiery outer fringe of gaseous matter — to be studied.

The material was violently expelled from the corona in a looping pattern at about 700,000 miles per hour, Hildner said.

He explained that such phenomena apparently result from sudden changes in the corona's magnetic field. Precisely what triggers these changes is still unknown, he added.

Ordinarily such outbursts, like solar flares, emit radiation that causes magnetic storms in the earth's atmosphere. Often these storms interfere with radio communications over wide areas.

But Friday's solar event produced only slight increases in background radiation on earth, said Hildner.

"This is surprising, it's a puzzle to us," he said.

Aside from their observations of the sun, the crew worked mainly on troubleshooting faulty systems and catching up on housekeeping. In the afternoon the men were given time for their first showers after nearly two weeks in space.

And, like tourists on an ultimate round-the-world cruise, there was an opportunity to snap pictures of the scenery.

Aiming a camera through the space station's window, Bean announced, "We've been taking a few pictures of Rio (de Janeiro) and Sao Paulo" in Brazil. "It's too bad there were a lot of clouds over Montevideo."

Bean and Garriott also asked the Mission Control center to set up telephone calls with their wives.

NASA officials said the crew was overdue for some rest and recreation. The mission, which began July 28, got off to a slow start because of troublesome motion sickness and mechanical problems. The delays resulted in a cancellation of a scheduled day off last week.

Still-Secret Contributions To Be Revealed

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Millions of dollars in still-secret contributions to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign will be disclosed to California officials by Sept. 28, Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. said Friday.

Brown, a Democrat, said Nixon campaign officials agreed to the disclosures Friday after a month of negotiations.

The report to be filed is to include secret contributions made to the President's reelection campaign before a new federal campaign disclosure law went into effect April 7, Brown said in a statement.

"Although federal law may not require disclosure of pre-April 7 contributions, California law clearly does require full disclosure of campaign donations no matter when they were received," said Brown, a probable candidate for governor next year.

The Finance Committee to Reelect the President and other

Nixon fund-raising organizations are scheduled to file similar reports in Washington the same day under an agreement with Common Cause.

Brown said that the Washington filing will include contributions only for the period from Jan. 1 to April 7, 1972.

Brown said the Nixon committees have agreed to attempt to reconstruct contributions before Jan. 1, 1972, for California officials.

Thus, Brown said, he expects the California report to contain more details about the Nixon campaign fund-raising efforts than the Washington report.

The California report is to include more than $1 million in funds raised for Nixon's 1968 campaign for President and held during the interim by Herbert Kalmbach, Nixon's former personal attorney.

Kalmbach told Brown some of this money was turned over for use against George Wallace's campaign for governor of Alabama in 1970.

Hunt For Boy Goes On Despite Chance Of Hoax

Albuquerque, N.M. (UPI) — The search for a young boy crying for help over citizens' band radios expanded from New Mexico to Arizona Friday despite indications the transmissions could be a hoax.

Searchers in New Mexico said they will look through the weekend for the youth and then stop, "win, lose or draw."

The pleading voice of the child — who has told searchers he is in an overturned pickup truck in mountainous terrain — has been monitored since Tuesday by radio operators from California to Mississippi.

The search has been concentrated in central New Mexico, although a resident of Phoenix, Ariz., reported Friday he had picked up the boy's transmissions.

Frank Laughlin told authorities the boy said his name was David Peak and he was seven years old. Laughlin quoted the boy as saying he was without water or food although a river was nearby. He also said his father was hurt but not seriously.

The information supplied by Laughlin contrasted with that he had given searchers earlier this week. In previous transmissions, the boy had said his name was Larry and that his father was dead.

While the search continued in central New Mexico, similar operations were resumed in southeast Arizona's Chiricahua Mountains.

No confirmed radio contact has been made with the boy by New Mexico searchers since he said, "help, Blue Eyes," early Friday. Blue Eyes is the code name of an Albuquerque citizen's band operator who has talked with the boy.

Man Molests Woman, 18

An 18-year-old Lincoln woman was molested late Friday morning at 17th and E, according to police reports.

Police said the woman was walking along the street when a white male, 20 to 25 years old, six feet tall, weighing 200 to 225 pounds pushed her against a telephone pole and sexually assaulted her.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
